

YOUTHFUL BATHER TRIES TO STEAL

A young lady reported to be about fifteen years of age who was at the swimming pool on Monday evening was caught trying to get away with some clothes belonging to the bathers, but upon being detected gave back the garments and tried to make those who saw the performance believe that she had made a mistake.

It was getting dusk in the evening and there was a large crowd at the pool, and many of them had hung their clothes in the dressing rooms. When some of them came to leave the water they found that a part of

The girl was suspected of being the one who had taken the clothes and after some hesitation she was asked to deliver up the goods, which she reluctantly did, claiming all the time that there must be some mistake.

take, as she had worn several skirts and other articles when she came to the pool, and could not imagine where they had gone to.

She then gave a hard effort to get all their clothes back and the guilty one was allowed to go her way, the general opinion being that she was more fool than a thief, as she had shown very little sense in the manner in which she had gone about the matter, and seemed to care very little when she was discovered.

More Bowling Alleys.

Guy Getts has purchased three new bowling alleys which he will install at once in this place. He has rented the building to the north of him, formerly occupied by Joe Garaski and saloon and will fit it up for his pool and billiard hall and the building on the corner will be used exclusively for his five alleys. When completed this city will have as nice a place of its kind as can be found anywhere in a city its size and Mr.

getts is to be congratulated upon the success he has made in furnishing our people with that kind of amusement.

Changes at the Hospital.
Owing to the resignation of Mrs. Rogers Mott as treasurer of the hospital association, Mrs. Charles E. Boles was on Monday elected to fill the vacancy. Mrs. Geo. M. Hill was elected as secretary of the association.

Miss Hawkins, who has been superintendent of the institution has resigned and another competent person will be appointed.

Arrested for Fast Driving.
W. C. McGlynn was arrested on Friday for driving over the bridge faster than a walk. When brought to the station, he was charged with driving over the bridge at a speed of 100 miles an hour.

That he had driven as stated in the complaint but also stated that it was necessary for him to go the speed limit to make it to the station.

CANALS A DEAD ISSUE.

There are in this country a class of people who are worrying themselves quite a bit because we do not have a deep waterway between the Great Lakes and the ocean by way of the Mississippi river.

They have issued hundreds of literature on the subject, just to show that you can convey freight by canal boat cheaper than can be done by train. Then in order to elicit the matter they have proven that the freight can be conveyed quicker by canal boat than it can by an ordinary freight train.

By careful compilation of statistics they have proven that the average piece of freight travels only fifteen miles per day by freight train, and that a better speed than this can be made by canal boat.

All of which may be true, and then it may not, but the "boom" public does not seem to care a cuss one way or the other. They go right on shipping their freight by rail, ignoring the rapid transit of the modern canal boat drawn by a mule and the fact that it can be handled for half the money.

When the public gets pointed a certain way it is hard to lead them off. They may be expostulated with, argued and reasoned with, and given further advice, and still they go right along in their own way regardless of the fact that their neighbor is trying his level best to help them out.

There was a time when it was all the rage to ship by water and the canal boat and river packet was in constant use. However, times have changed, and nowadays there is a railroad running into nearly every town of any consequence, while a large majority of them have no stream or body of navigable water, and the consequence is that people use the steam cars for the transportation of their merchandise because it is the most modern and up-to-date method in existence.

Mrs. Henry Pellerells was granted a divorce in circuit court from Henry Pellerells on Tuesday.

Miss Clara Berg, stenographer at the Mackinac Mfg. Co., office is spending a two weeks vacation in Winona, Miss. Beth Lamberton is doing her work during her absence.

Mrs. M. C. Geoghan returned on Friday from Rochester, Minn., where she underwent an operation at the Mayo Bros. hospital. She is feeling much improved in health since her return.

M. P. Matthews of Saratoga was a caller at this office on Tuesday. Mr. Matthews reports a heavy hail storm on his way Sunday evening which did considerable damage to crops. The hail were about the size of plums.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Krings of Milladore adopted the year and a half old child of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dillinger, the proceedings being before Judge W. J. Conway. The parents of the child were granted a divorce in circuit court the same day.

DRAINAGE CASES BEFORE THE COURT

Circuit Court convened in this city on Monday and one of the matters that was taken up by Judge Park was the hearing of the evidence in the Wood County Drainage District. It is expected that these cases will occupy the attention of the court for about a week, there being apparently considerable diversity of opinion among those affected as to the amount they are benefited and in some cases as to whether they are benefited at all.

On Tuesday the jury was taken out to view the premises so that they might decide the cases in accordance with the facts and thus come as near doing justice to everybody as is possible under the circumstances.

It would seem as if in some cases the cost to property owners was out of proportion to the benefits received, but then the jury ought to decide the case in a fairly equitable manner after looking over the ground.

Word was received here on Monday that Ed. Elliot of Nekeosa was taken to Oshkosh on Saturday had died there on Monday.

Mrs. A. Lincoln Putnam and children of Timber Lake, S. D., are in the city for several days. Mr. Putnam will be remembered as a former pastor of the Baptist church, but moved to the Dakotas about three years ago to take up a homestead.

Ernest McFarland and Miss Francis Minch, of Madison are visiting at the home of Mrs. R. McFarland this week. Miss Lillian Minch, who has been camping at Saylor Lake stopped off on her way home on Tuesday and spent the day with her sister.

WILL BE IMPROVED.

Witter House Will Undergo Changes During the Coming Summer.

If the present arrangements are carried out it is probable that the Witter House will undergo some changes and repairs during the coming summer that will make this a much more popular hotel even than it has been in the past.

Since the present proprietor, D. J. Gerow, took hold of the place many improvements have been made about the hotel, and the traveling public, and the result is that the patronage of the hotel has steadily increased until at present time it is impossible to accommodate the business that comes there.

It is now proposed to build an addition that will give them about twenty more rooms and rearrange the interior of the building so that it will be more inviting, and when completed there is no question that the hotel will become more popular than ever.

The saloon keepers of Stevens Point have been ordered to close their places of business and Sunday last they obeyed the order and the drinking places were closed all day. This is quite a change for Stevens Point, as the thing was never tried before.

Nic and John Urbanowski of Stevens Point and Tony Urbanowski of Oshkosh came up on Saturday to Sunday with Max Urbanowski. Sunday the four drove to Biran where they visited with Peter Urbanowski. The five brothers had not been together before for fifteen years, and as a consequence they enjoyed the visit very much. Adolph Maslowski of Stevens Point was also a guest at the Max Urbanowski place on Sunday.

BEACHEY SHAKES DICE WITH DEATH

SAYS TAKING CHANCES IS NOT BUSINESS WITH HIM, BUT A DIVERSION.

LIKES FLYING FOR THRILLS

As Boy, Beachey Was Great Student of Birds and Their Means of Traveling Through the Air.

RACES RUN ON TIME

There will be no long waits between races at the 1914 state fair. Supt. of Speed R. J. White, an experienced horseman and race man, will see that at every heat is put on exactly on the minute.

"There will be no tiresome delays this year," he says. "People will see racing all of the time while each day's racing program is on."

Milwaukee, Wis., July 21.—How would you like to shake dice with death across the table from you waiting to take in the stakes, if you lose? That is practically what Lincoln Beachey, world's greatest aviator, does and will do every time he makes a flight at this year's Wisconsin State Fair. He will fly three times each day on Sept. 15, 16, 17 and 18.

Beachey is famed as the most skillful of all aviators and does the most remarkable things with an aeroplane, but his scientific and skillful feats pale into insignificance when compared with the stunts he accomplished through just sheer nerve and daring.

The loop and the upside down flying feats are easy for Beachey when everything goes right. But let the motor hesitate just a fraction of a second as the aeroplane is at the apex of the loop and a "tail slide" of a few feet will mean the death of the flier. Beachey is no fool. He knows far better than anyone else just what chance he is taking. But it's all a delightful game for him—this sport of making his neck on the magnets, carburetor, wiring and dozens of other factors in the construction of an aeroplane.

"It is simply the dancing along life's icy brink and the attendant excitement that makes life worth while," said Beachey recently. "Chance-taking is not a business with me. It is a delightful diversion, and no music lover ever is more charmed by listening to the inspiring strains of his favorite opera; superbly sung by a great artist, when I am charmed at the hum of my motor when I am sailing in or out of a loop and upside down flight. Some hunt lions and tigers for thrills. But I love the sky and answer its call because my whole life centers around the sensations of flying."

A great scientist once told me that I had the bird instinct in my bones. As a boy I was a great lover of birds. Their song did not appeal to me as much as their superb dips and dives and other feats of flying. I often wanted to emulate them. Now I can do things the birds cannot do. I can loop the loop and fly upside down. Birds can not."

Away From Dust of Autos.

The increase of motoring and the consequent increase of dust have, to some considerable extent, changed the value of villa and hotel sites in visitors' resorts. The choice, especially in the south of France and Italy, is now much in favor of houses well away from the main road, and even well outside towns.

Getting the Best of It.

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

SYNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil De Lancy are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to leave their training camp and return to the United States. In the border town of Guadalupe Bud meets Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a very rich mine which Kruger had been unable to acquire. Bud agrees to the plan and then allows the land to be taken by Kruger. Bud and Phil arrive at Fortuna near where the mine, known as the Eagle Tail, is located. They are the services of Cruz Mendez, who has been friendly to Kruger, to acquire the title for them, and get a permit to do preliminary work. Aragon protests and accuses them of jumping his claim. Bud discovers that matrimonial entanglements prevent Mendez from performing a valid title. Phil, who has been paying attention to Aragon's daughter, Gracia, who is in her own name. Bud objects to Phil's intentions to Gracia. Aragon falls in his attempt to drive them off the claim. Phil is reported in the vicinity.

"It is the desire of the Yaqui," he had said, when rebuked for serving under the hated flag of Mexico, "to kill Mexicans. And," he added grimly, "the federals at this time seem best able to give us guns for that purpose."

But it had been a year now since Bule had passed his word and, though they had battled valiantly, their land had not been given back to them. The wild Yaqui, the irreconcilables who never came down from the hills, had gone on the warpath again, but Bule and his men still served.

Only in two things did they disobey their officers—they would not stack their arms, and they would not retreat while there were still more Mexicans to be killed. Otherwise they were very good soldiers.

But now, after the long campaign in Chihuahua and a winter of idleness at Agua Negra, they were marching south toward their native land and, in spite of the stern glances of their leaders, they burst forth in wild Yaqui songs which, if their words had been known, might easily have caused their Mexican officers some slight uneasiness.

It was, in fact, only a question of days, months, or years until the entire Yaqui contingent would desert, taking their arms and ammunition with them. "Gee, what a bunch of men!" exclaimed Bud, as he stood off and admired their stark forms.

"There's some genuine fighters for you," he observed to Phil and a giant Yaqui, standing near, returned his praise with a smile.

"W'y, hello there, Amigo!" hailed Bud, jerking his head in a friendly salute. "That's a fellow I'm making signs to in Agua Negra," he explained. "Dogged if I ain't stuck on these Yaquis—they're all men, believe me!"

"Good workers, all right," conceded De Lancy, "but I'd hate to have 'em get after me with those guns. They say they've killed a lot of Americans, one time and another."

"Well, if they did it was for being caught in bad company," said Hooker. "I'd take a chance with 'em any time—but if you go into their country with a Mexican, you're in for trouble on general principles. Say," he cried impulsively, "I'm going over to talk with Amigo!"

With a broad grin on his honest face he advanced toward the giant Yaqui and shook hands ceremoniously.

"Where you go?" he inquired in Spanish, at the same time rolling a cigarette and asking for a sign for a match.

"Moctezuma," answered the Indian gravely. Then, as Bud offered him the makings, he, too, rolled a cigarette and they smoked for a minute in silence.

"You live here?" inquired the Yaqui at last.

"Come here," corrected Bud. "I have mine—no more."

"You Live Here?" inquired the Yaqui.

turn in that direction, and the fear of the raiders was still.

Around and around the band stand and in and out beneath the trees the pleasure loving maidens from down below walked decorously with their mothers, and the little band of Fortuna Americans, to whom life for some months had been a trifle burdensome, awoke suddenly to the beauty of the evening.

And among the rest of the maidens, but far more ravishing and high-bred, walked Gracia Aragon, at whom Bud in particular stole many secret glances from beneath the broad brim of his hat, hoping that by some luck the instructors would come upon the town, and he could defend her—his alone. For he felt that he could do it against any hundred Mexicans that ever breathed.

CHAPTER XII.

In its inception the Fortuna hotel had not been intended for the use of Mexicans—in fact, its rates were practically prohibitive for anyone not being paid in gold—but, since most of the Americans had left, and seven dollars a day was no different to the rich refugee land owner, it became a sudden international, with a fine mixture of purse-proud Spaniards and race-proud American adventurers.

Not a very pleasing combination for half. This is done in cases where the lumps are used in stoves tightly closed, such as those known as air-tight furnaces.

Several pails of water thrown over a ton of coal will increase its value greatly to the consumer.

the parents of romantic damsel distressed for some prearranged marriage of state, but very exciting for the damsel and most provocative to the Americans.

After the promenade in the plaza the mothers by common consent pre-empted the upstairs reception-room, gathering their precious charges in close; while the Americans, after their custom, foregathered in the lobby, convenient to the bar. Hot arguments about the revolution, and predictions of events to come served to pass the early evening, with many scornful glances at the Mexican damsel who went so innocently up the stairs.

And then, as the refugees retired to their apartments and the spirit of adventure rose uppermost, Phil De Lancy made a dash out into the darkness and came back with a Mexican string band.

"A serenade, boys!" he announced, as the musicians fled sheepishly into the hotel. "Our guests, the fair señoritas, you know! We'll make those young Mexican dudes look like two spots before the war is over. Who's game now for a song beneath the windows? You know the old stand-by—'La Paloma' and 'Teretita Mia'—and you want to listen to me sing 'Me Gustan Todas' to Gracia, the fairest of the fair! Come on, fellows, out in the plaza, and then listen to the old folks come."

They adjourned then, after a drink for courage, to the moonlight and the plaza; and there, beneath the shuttered windows and vacant balconies, the guitars and violins took up "La Paloma," while Phil and a few brave spirits sang.

A silence followed their first attempt, as well as their second and third, and the comisario of police, a mild creature owned and paid by the company, came around and made a few ineffectual protests.

But inside the company's concession, where by common consent the militant rurales kept their hands off, the Americans knew they were safe, and they soon jollied the comisario into taking a drink and departing. Then De Lancy took up the burden, and the string band, hired by the hour, strummed on as if for eternity.

One by one the windows opened; fretful fathers stepped out on the balcony and, bound by the custom and convention of the country, thanked them and bade them good night. But the two windows behind which the Senor Aragon and his family reposed did not open and, though the dwindling band stood directly under their balcony, and all knew that his daughter was the fairest of the fair, Don Cipriano did not wish them good night.

Perhaps he recognized the leading tenor, the "big voice" of Bud Hooker, trying to still the riot—but, however it was, he would not speak to them, and De Lancy would not quit.

"Try 'em on American music!" he cried, as everyone but Bud went away in disgust, "the latest rag from Broadway, New York. Here, gimme that guitar, hombre, and listen to this now!"

He picked out a clever bit of syncopation and pitched his voice to a heady twang:

"Down to the garden where the red roses grow,
Oh, my love, let me go!
Pluck me like a flower, cuddle me as you please,
Love is the heart of the Red Rose Rag!"

There was some swaying to that, and it seemed to make an impression, for just as he was well started on the chorus the slats of one of the windows opened and a pair of white shoes shone through the space. It was the ladies, then, who were getting interested! Phil yelled on:

"Sweetest honey-bee, be sweet to me!
My heart is free, but here's the key!"

And then, positively, he could see that patch of white heat time. He took heart of grace at that and sang on to the end, and at a suggestion of clapping in dumb-show he gave an encore and ragged it over again.

"Everybody's doin' it, doin' it, doin' it!" he began, as the shadow dance ceased.

times in the morning to get his partner up; "I'm going out to the mine!"

Then, with a saddle-gun under his knee and his six-shooter hung at his hip, he rode rapidly down the road, turning out from time to time to let long cavalcades of mules string by. The dead-eyed arrieros, each with his combined mule-bird and whiplash swinging free, seemed to have very little on their minds but their pack-lashings, and yet they must be three days out from Moctezuma.

Their mules, too, were well loaded with the products of the hot country—bananas of corn in red leather saddlebags, and fruits in hand-made crates, panoches of sugar in balanced frames, long joints of sugar-cane for the dulce pedlers, and nothing to indicate either haste or flight.

Three times he let long pack-trains go by without a word, and then at last, overcome by curiosity, he inquired about the revolts.

"What revolts?" queried the old man to whom he spoke.

"Why, the men of Bernardo Bravo," answered Bud; "the men who are marching to take Moctezuma."

"When I left Moctezuma," returned the old man politely, "all was quiet—"

There were no revolts. Since then, I cannot say.

"But the soldiers!" cried Bud. "Surely you saw them! They were marching to fight the rebels."

"Perhaps so," shrugged the arriero, laying the lash of his topolo across the rump of a mule; "but I know nothing about it."

"No," muttered Bud, as he continued on his way; "and I'll bet nobody else does."

Inquiry showed that in this, too, he was correct. From those who traveled fast and from those who traveled slow he received the same wondering answer—the country might be filled with revolts; but, as for them, they knew nothing about it.

Not until he got back to Fortuna and the busy federal telegraph wire did he hear any more news of rapine and bloodshed, and the light which dawned upon him then was gradually dawning upon the whole town.

It was a false alarm, given out for purposes of state and the "higher politics" with which Mexico is cursed, and the most that was ever seen of Bernardo Bravo and his lawless men were twenty miserable creatures, half-starved, but with guns in their hands, who had come down out of the mountains east of Moctezuma and killed a few cows for beef.

Thoroughly disgusted, and yet vaguely alarmed at this bit of opera-buff warfare, Bud set himself resolutely to work to hunt up men for their mine, and, as many poor people were out of employment because of the general stagnation of business, he soon had ten Mexicans at his call.

Then, as Phil had dropped out of sight, he ordered supplies at the store and engaged Cruz Mendez—who had spent his fortune in three days—to pack the goods out on his mules.

They were ready to start the next morning if De Lancy could be found to order the powder and tools, and so the afternoon wore on and no Phil appeared. Bud went on a long hunt which finally discovered him in the balcony of their window, making signs in the language of the "bear," as a man who flirts with a woman in Mexico is called.

"Say, Phil," he halted, disregarding his partner's obvious preoccupation; "break away for a minute and tell me what kind of powder to get to break that schist—the store closes at five o'clock, and—"

He thrust his head out the door as he spoke and paused, abashed. Through the half-closed portal of the next balcony but one he beheld the golden hair of Gracia Aragon, and she fixed her brown eyes upon him with a dazzling, mischievous smile.

"O-ho!" murmured Bud, laying a compelling hand on De Lancy and backing swiftly out of range; "so this is what you're up to—talking signs! But say, Phil," he continued, beckoning him peremptorily with a jerk of his head, "I got ten men hired and a lot of grub bought, and if you don't pick out that mining stuff we're going to lose a day. So get the lady to excuse you and come on now."

"In a minute," pleaded Phil, and he went at the end of his allotted time, and perhaps it was the imp of jealousy that put strength into Hooker's arm.

"Well, that's all right," said Bud, as Phil began his laughing excuses; "but you want to remember the Maline, partner—we didn't come down here to play the bear. When they're any love-making to be done I want to be in on it. And you want to remember that promise you made me—you said you wouldn't have a thing to do with the Aragon outfit unless I was with you!"

"I'm not a jealous man," answered Hooker harshly; "jealous as the devil! And I want you to keep that promise, see?"

"Aw, Bud," began De Lancy incredulously; but Hooker silenced him with a look. Perhaps he was really jealous, or perhaps he only said so to have his way, but Phil saw that he was in earnest, and he went quietly by his side.

But love had set his brain in a whirl, and he thought no more of his promise—only of some subtle way of meeting his inamorata, some way which Bud would fall to see.

CHAPTER XIII.

For sixty days and more, while the weather had been turning from cold to warm and they had been laboring feebly to clear away the great slide of loose rock that covered up the ledge, the Eagle Tail mine had remained a mystery.

Whether, like the old Eagle Tail of frontier fame, it was so rich that only the eagle's head was needed to turn the chunks into twenty-dollar gold pieces; or whether, like many other frontier mines, it was nothing but a hole in the ground, was a matter still to be settled. And Bud, for one, was determined to settle it quickly.

"Come on," he said, as Phil hesitated to open up the way to the lead; "we got a month, maybe less, to get to the bottom of this; and then the hills will be lousy with rebels. If they're nothing here, we want to find out about it quick and skip—and if we strike it, by grab, they ain't enough red-faggers in Sonora to pry me loose from it. So show these hombres where to work and we'll be up against rock by the end of the week."

The original Eagle Tail tunnel had been driven into the side of a steep hill; so steep, in fact, that the loose shale stretched in long shoots from the base of the frowning porphyry dikes that crowned the tops of the hills to the bottom of the canyon. On either side of the discovery gulch sharp ridges, perforated by the goopher-holes of the Mexicans and the ancient workings of the Spaniards, ran directly up the hill to meet the contact. But it was against the face of the big ridge itself that Kruger had driven his drift and exploded his giant blast of dynamite, and the whole slope had been altered and covered with a slide of rock.

Against this slide, in the days when they were marking time, Bud and his partner had directed their energies, throwing the loose stones aside, building up walls against the slip, and clearing the way to the solid schist.

There, somewhere beneath the jumble of powder-ridden rock, lay the ledge which, if they found it, would make them rich; and now with single-blast and drill they attacked the last huge fragments, blasting them into pieces and groveling deeper until they could strike the contact, where the schist and porphyry met and the gold spray had spewed up between.

Years Had Left Their Mark
Great Artist's Model for Divine Face
Served Later in Depiction of That of Judas.

On the wall of an old monastery in Milan hangs the famous "Last Supper" of Leonardo da Vinci. It is said that this artist, in painting the faces of the apostles, studied the countenances of good men whom he knew. When he was ready to paint the face of Christ he could find none that would satisfy his conception. After years of careful search, says the Strand Magazine, the painter happened to meet one Pietro Bardellini, a choir-boy of exquisite voice, belonging to the cathedral. Being struck by the beautiful features and tender manner that he spoke an angelic soul, the artist invited the boy to be the study for the divine face.

All was done carefully and reverently, but the picture was yet incomplete, for the face of Judas was absent. Again the painter set about in search of a countenance. Years passed before his search was rewarded and the picture finally completed. As the names of good men whom he knew, the artist was about to dismiss the miserable and degraded wretch who had been his awful choice, the man looked up at him and said:

"You have painted me before."

DAINTY LITTLE DRESS

PARTICULARLY DESIGNED FOR WOMEN OF SLENDER FIGURE.

Nothing Better in Summer Evening
Frocks Has Been Offered Than
This Typically French Confection Described.

If you are slender and rather tall you can wear the dress of the sketch and know that it was designed for your particular type, but if you are well, if you are not, it will certainly never do. It was worn by a young woman to whom it was not at all suited at a recent private dance, but the dress itself was so altogether dainty and youthful that I am sending home a sketch in case any one wishes to copy it for a lovely summer evening frock, writes Lillian E. Young in a letter from Paris to the Washington Star.

These many ruffled skirts are extremely modish just now, and are most becoming to the type that suit, for, naturally, the design lends fullness to a slight figure and cuts the height as well.

In this instance dawn-pink chiffon was used throughout, though if something a little more substantial is preferred the skirt may be of taffeta, and the bodice of chiffon to match. The little bow knots set at the top of each flounce down the left side of the skirt were in azure-blue velvet ribbon, and lent a daintily quaint touch to the costume. The sleeves were similarly trimmed.

Don't get the idea that such a skirt is hard to make. It isn't—but it will require some time and care to arrange the flounces evenly. They are simply straight strips of the material (doubled if of chiffon, but single in taffeta) about six to seven inches deep and evenly gathered at the top check, the sort known as shepherd's plaid; the skirt with a wide flat plait down the front, no other fullness, the coat with basques curved away to the sides and faced with the check put on bias. A waistcoat and wide collar in white pique complete the costume.

A third, with a seam down the front of a plain skirt, is in green satin cloth, with a short coat, the waistcoat cut in one with the collar, and both in white pique, the cuffs matching.

One of these is in sulphur colored crepe de chine with frills of black silk muslin over white ones.

Another is made of brocade gauze in purple or deep green, and the frills are in the shade of green chiffon over others of pale mauve harmonizing with the tone of purple. The hat worn with this was a bergerie in purple straw, with echepeigne of white flowers and green leaves.

The upward curve from the back characterizes many of the new coats as well as a great number of the draperies on skirts. One coat has three basques superposed, each a little shorter than the one beneath, and each curved up toward the waist, the upper one reaching to the chest, where it fastens across with a large button, partly covering a fancy silk waistcoat, the points of which fall below the topmost basque, but over the second one. These, as well as the lowest, cross over each other and are kept as flat as possible in front, though rather full as regards the sides and back.

The waistcoat in the case has a wide black moire collar which turns back over the top of the coat. Another tailor-made is in white and black and attached to a plain foundation skirt underneath. This may be of strong net or of china silk or mousseline.

The bodice will need a net inner waist. The chiffon over-part was cut with short kimono sleeves finished with a frill of chiffon, and the open neck, too, had a finishing frill.

The girdle was rather broad and topped by an upstanding ruffle of the skirt material. It tied at one side with a long end and loop caught under a natural-looking rose.

The same dress would be delightful in taffeta and chiffon of that lovely cream shade that suggests it might have lain for years in some old attic chest, and the girdle could be of turquoise blue velvet caught with a silver gauze rose, while the small bowknots in the skirt could be made of very narrow silver gauze ribbon. Again, flowered taffeta, in one of the smaller weaving patterns, will make another charming variation.

You will probably be able to guess from designs such as this that fuller skirts are really on the way.

WAIST SHOULD BE NORMAL

Correct Corseting Always One of the Most Important Aids to Health and Beauty.

At the root of the ills to which feminine flesh is heir is incorrect corseting and tight lacing. These are by no means synonymous terms. One may be incorrectly yet loosely corseted. Today it is the exceptional woman who laces her corset so tightly that her figure assumes an unnatural contour. Ten years ago many women did.

This improvement is to some degree to the credit of the wearers of corsets, but to a still greater degree it is to the credit of corset manufacturers and the mandates of fashion. Women who have just regard for their health and beauty realize that the normal waist measurement is an important adjunct thereto. This is proved by the fact that all ready-made garments are two inches larger over the waist than they were two years ago, which means that most women who used to wear a 22 corset now wear a 24, and so on through the different sizes.

Leading physicians all admit that women require support for the abdomen. Support is entirely different from suppression. If the abdomen is suppressed, a lot of trouble is brought on, the first sign of which is constipation. The colon cannot function properly. More depends upon the colon than most people are aware of, even some physicians. The direct results of restricting the action of the colon are weakness, insomnia and dyspepsia; the indirect results are torpidity, indigestion and would be superfluous, because the prevailing styles in corsets conform in a great degree to nature's demands.

The wise physician raises his voice not against the use but the abuse of the corset. A corset which supports the abdomen will never be condemned by those who are conversant with the structure of the human body, masculine or feminine. More men wear abdominal belts than is dreamed of by the public. Some of the most advanced scientists state that women can wear corsets now which conform to the latest fashion without sacrificing their health.—Harriet Edwards Payes, in Woman's World.

On Dainty Aprons.

On dainty aprons it is well to sew beading instead of the regulation binding and strings. This beading should be about an inch in width, and wash ribbon should be run through it. This ribbon serves for strings, and at the same time lends to the beauty of the apron. The ribbon can be slipped out when the apron is soiled. It can then be pressed out, freshened up and replaced when the apron has returned snow white from a visit to the tub.

Many Uses for the Scarf

Remarkable Number of Ways by Which Modish Accessories May Be Made Effective.

One of the latest uses of the scarf is to be converted into an elongated fichu by being trimmed all around with a gathered rill. When worn, this rill lies back on the scarf around the neck, but falls forward in front and around the ends.

One of these is in sulphur colored crepe de chine with frills of black silk muslin over white ones.

Another is made of brocade gauze in purple or deep green, and the frills are in the shade of green chiffon over others of pale mauve harmonizing with the tone of purple. The hat worn with this was a bergerie in purple straw, with echepeigne of white flowers and green leaves.

NOT A CASE OF CHARITY

Secretary of Millionaire Was Just an Extreme of the Graduate of 1914 Style.

Jerome S. McWade, at a tea in Detroit, was talking about the girl graduate.

"I called on an old millionaire concerning an investment the other day," he said, "and, as I took leave, I drew the old boy out into the hall and said: 'George, my boy—about that private secretary of yours. Excuse me, George, if I seem to overstep the bounds of decorum; but I'm a friend of yours, and—'

"In short, George," I struggled on, "I know she's a pretty girl, and I young to mean any real harm, and so forth—but that's a terribly long list in her skirt. George; and at three o'clock the other morning she was drinking and smoking cigarettes and taking champagne at the Chat Mort in one of those transparent revelation Sunday with jagers in a tight boy's suit like Annie Kollerman wears—skin tight and no stockings, you know, George—and so, really, she's so young and pretty, I'm half afraid she'll break up your home. And, oh, George, what a sad, sad thing that would be for a man of your age. I guess you only employ her out of charity, yet—"

"But here the old fellow gave me a nasty laugh and interrupted me. 'No,' he said. 'No, I don't employ her out of charity, McWade. You see, she's my daughter, just graduated from college.'—New York World.

ITCHED AND BURNED

Silverwood, Mich.—"My baby was about six months old when he first began to break out with little pimples on his head and face. Then they would run water and keep getting worse until his head was a regular sore eruption and water would run and stream from it and his face also. His whole body was affected. They were little white, pimply, itchy, itched and burned something terrible. His clothing seemed to irritate him and it was almost impossible for him to sleep at night. They also disfigured him as they were on his face.

"We tried medicine but without success. The trouble must have lasted three or four weeks when I thought I would try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I would bathe him with warm water, as warm as he could stand and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Cuticura Ointment. The very first time that I did this it seemed to relieve him as he slept well and inside of two weeks he was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. L. White, Jan. 29, 1914.

Beauty Rules for Summer.

Avoid hot and very rich meals, light and digestible food is required, consisting chiefly of fish, eggs, poultry, salads, cheese and fruit, sweets made with milk, cream and eggs, and so on, mostly cold, though too many ices should not be taken. They are responsible for most summer maladies. Feed drinks should also be taken in moderation; and the refreshing lemonade or "cups" made with fruit juices, hock, moselle or with light straws, are best. If spirits are taken at all it should be infrequently.

The face should only be washed with soap and water last thing at night, but it is very refreshing to spray it and the back frequently with rose or elder-flower water to which simple tincture of benzoin has been added, drop by drop, in the proportion of one teaspoonful of the tincture to a half pint of rose water. Dry with a soft handkerchief, then apply a little non-fatty face cream, smooth this off with the handkerchief and dust on a little good powder. The face wash mentioned is wonderfully cleansing, and, with the cream, provides a great protection against freckles and sunburn.

Giving the Age Away.

Mrs. Styles—I see a count of the annual rings of a California redwood tree indicated that it had commenced its career in 1550 A. D.

Mr. Styles—Better hide your rings, dear.

Proof Positive.

"Do you suppose these women of fashion and society ever indulge in self-reflection?"

"Well, what do you suppose they have all those boudoir mirrors and pier glasses for?"

The man who travels on his check ought to have a pretty strong face.

HIT THE SPOT.

Postum Knocked Out Coffee Ails.

There's a good deal of satisfaction and comfort in hitting upon the right thing to rid one of the varied and distressing ailments caused by coffee drinking.

Peacocks Animal, Whose Cries Re-

Home at Los Angeles.

Jake, the black cat whose wails led neighbors to the dead body of Frank Hamble of 216 West Fifty-ninth street, Los Angeles, after he had been extinct a week, found a new home. He slept for hours in the sunshine, apparently unmindful of the harrowing hours spent shut in the room with the remains of his late master.

Neighbors adopted the cat when, almost starved, it was taken from the little two-room house where Hamble passed the last hours of his life. Jake was almost a skeleton, and great care had to be taken at first in order not to overfeed him, but, stretched in a rocking chair, his sides bulging and his big green eyes closed to mere slits, Jake was the picture of contentment.

Hamble's mother, Mrs. F. A. Saunders, offered to care for the sole companion of her son for many months prior to his death, but when she found Jake apparently happy and content to remain with a neighboring family, she left him in his adopted home.

The body of Mr. Hamble was found by Patrolman Johnson after the mournful cries of the cat had aroused the neighborhood to the fact that something was wrong in the little cottage.

Obliging.
The fussy lady had noticed that the rude man sitting beside her on the street car had expectorated on the floor. The fussy lady immediately signaled the conductor and that official came in to see what was wanted.

"Do you allow spitting in this car?" demanded the fussy lady.

"Well, no," replied the conductor.

"But you can come out on the platform if you want to, lady."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE DEVIL CHAIR

A Chronicle of the Strange Adventures of John Haynes and His Gyroscope Vehicle

BY THE DEEP SEA TRANSIT

By H. M. EGBERT

(Copyright by W. G. Chapman)

BUT HE WOULD HACK THE LIFE OUT OF THIS TREACHEROUS HUMAN THING THAT SOUGHT HIS OWN.

John Haynes had fulfilled all the purposes which had inspired him when he made his escape from the state penitentiary at Nokomis Falls. By means of the powerful gyroscope which he had invented, he hunted down those enemies who had flung him into prison upon a trumped-up charge; he had discovered the wife and daughter who had been torn from him, and he had placed them in each other's arms. Then, since his wife, believing him dead, had married again, and because the stains of blood which he had shed in the accomplishment of his revenge lay on his soul, he did not dare reveal himself to the woman to whom he was still legally bound, but made his way to a remote corner of the United States and hid there, under an assumed name.

How many thousands of miles he had traversed upon that wonderful machine of his! Traveling at the speed of two hundred miles an hour, whether it were bound to the feet or attached to an automobile or any other medium of locomotion, none could successfully pursue him, had he but a moment's warning. But now his want only to rest, to be alone, to think. It seemed to him that, having accomplished that revenge to which he had dedicated his life, he had no more to live for. His heart was bound irrevocably to the woman whom he had left in far-off China; Eleanor, his daughter, was happy in her reunion with her mother and in her marriage to the son of one of his old enemies. Haynes would have welcomed death. But he was still comparatively a young man; death seemed intolerably remote. He did not know what he would do. He rested, waiting till the plan came to him.

His rest was not destined to be a long one. The stories of his deeds had become common property throughout the length and breadth of the land. The government had taken up the pursuit which his enemies had abandoned; perforce when their fate met him. Haynes was a public enemy. Craftily, silently, proclaiming nothing of its intentions, the federal government set to work to hunt him down. What isolated men could never hope to do, the power of the nation might accomplish. Back state secretly pledged itself to assist in the work; the railroad companies, scores of detective agencies, all united against him. Haynes never knew where the blow was likely to fall.

Once, when he had broken free from the cordon of men that had gathered round the village in which he rested, while rushing at furious speed on his machine along the single rail of a long stretch of line in a desolate district, some instinct prompted him to cut off the power of the gyroscope and stop. He did so; then, looking ahead, he saw that a section of the line had been removed and cunningly replaced with painted clay. To have struck that at his tremendous speed would have meant instant death.

Once again, rushing through a long dingle in the Rockies, he encountered a new stone wall, built straight across the metals at a bend in the track. The mortar was still damp on it. Had he run into that he would have been smashed into nothingness. But his enemies did not know how swiftly the gyroscope could be halted and Haynes escaped with nothing worse than a few bruises.

They barred the roads and railway lines, they herded him, forewarned by all the subtle agencies in the possession of a government, into a barren, rocky region among the Cumberlands. All round the hills, at every mountain pass, armed guards were stationed. He had a territory of twelve square miles in which to rove, but he could not cross those boundaries that daily drew closer round him. At first he laughed at the futility of his pursuit. How could they stop him, when, at a rate of speed incredibly swifter than that of the fastest train, he could dash through them on the roads?

Then, all at once, he understood the government's design. He needed gasoline to replenish his engine. Geared though the gyroscope was to run on a minute consumption, still, whether it were bound to the feet or attached to an automobile or any other medium of locomotion, none could successfully pursue him, had he but a moment's warning. But now his want only to rest, to be alone, to think. It seemed to him that, having accomplished that revenge to which he had dedicated his life, he had no more to live for. He did so; then, looking ahead, he saw that a section of the line had been removed and cunningly replaced with painted clay. To have struck that at his tremendous speed would have meant instant death.

Once again, rushing through a long dingle in the Rockies, he encountered a new stone wall, built straight across the metals at a bend in the track. The mortar was still damp on it. Had he run into that he would have been smashed into nothingness. But his enemies did not know how swiftly the gyroscope could be halted and Haynes escaped with nothing worse than a few bruises.

They barred the roads and railway lines, they herded him, forewarned by all the subtle agencies in the possession of a government, into a barren, rocky region among the Cumberlands. All round the hills, at every mountain pass, armed guards were stationed. He had a territory of twelve square miles in which to rove, but he could not cross those boundaries that daily drew closer round him. At first he laughed at the futility of his pursuit. How could they stop him, when, at a rate of speed incredibly swifter than that of the fastest train, he could dash through them on the roads?

Then, all at once, he understood the government's design. He needed gasoline to replenish his engine. Geared though the gyroscope was to run on a minute consumption, still, whether it were bound to the feet or attached to an automobile or any other medium of locomotion, none could successfully pursue him, had he but a moment's warning. But now his want only to rest, to be alone, to think. It seemed to him that, having accomplished that revenge to which he had dedicated his life, he had no more to live for. His heart was bound irrevocably to the woman whom he had left in far-off China; Eleanor, his daughter, was happy in her reunion with her mother and in her marriage to the son of one of his old enemies. Haynes would have welcomed death. But he was still comparatively a young man; death seemed intolerably remote. He did not know what he would do. He rested, waiting till the plan came to him.

An hour later he saw shadows moving along the road, and, crouching low among the undergrowth, perceived two armed guards and the girl pass by within three feet of him and make their way toward the barn. He let them pass. When they were out of sight he stood upon his feet and started the mechanism. Then, with a whirl and a rush he was away, flying down the dark pass under the fleeting clouds and brilliant moon. He found the road at Hendricksville unguarded, crossed it, entered upon the main state highway, and, three hours later, removed the gyroscope in a far distant region.

But this adventure made Haynes realize that, henceforth, there would be no peace for him in the United States. And he craved peace, longed for it as only the hunted man can long for it. He wanted rest. Somewhere, before he died, he must become reconciled with his soul. He wanted to be alone, without companions, in some wild region where, telling next to the bottom of the recreating earth, he might refresh his spirit. And there, in such a place, he knew that he would find peace at last.

He must leave the new world. He would go to Norway. Once before, traveling to the northern part of the great Scandinavian peninsula, in search of one of those who had wronged him, he had been almost turned from his revenge in the majestic and solemn presence of those mighty mountains. He would go to Norway and dwell for a year in some remote hamlet. He still had five thousand dollars left; that would amply suffice for his needs. After that year he would know what to do.

But how was he to leave America when every port would be guarded, every ship inspected? True, he might turn north and west and strive to cross the frozen straits at the extremity of Alaska, but even with the wonderful gyroscope he doubted his ability to do this; moreover, he was tired of traveling. He could not endure the desolation of that icy wilderness. He reached New York and took up his abode in a cheap rooming house; he spent days walking the streets, pondering, starting at every word addressed to him by every stranger.

His nerves were giving way at last. He must decide speedily. Should he risk taking passage aboard some liner? Or should he ship before the mast? But either course seemed cruelly hazardous, and he saw the gyroscope would be useless.

Then it was that the idea came to him for his last adventure. He would travel by the electric cable underscans. Preposterous as the plan seemed, he had accomplished things almost equally extravagant. The cable lay along the bed of the sea. Even under the tremendous pressure of the salt water the spinning gyroscope was not likely to suffer injury, and if he could attain a speed of one hundred and fifty miles an hour he could cross to Ireland in twenty hours. The gyroscope would run true and slender rope beneath the waters. The thought struck his imagination. He rented a tiny shack on the Long Island shore and set to work on his contrivance.

He needed, first, to place the gyroscope beneath some oval-bodied or torpedo-shaped vessel such as would be capable of darting through the depths without encountering more than the minimum of resistance. This vessel must be enclosed and strongly roofed with steel in order to resist pressure. He must take a supply of oxygen—that was not difficult, since one could obtain a diver's helmet attached to a storage tank in the dress, supplying oxygen sufficient to maintain the process of respiration for half an hour. And that would be all! The scheme was amazing in its simplicity. He would hire a fishing boat, place the machine aboard, sail for Sandy Hook, and there, just out of sight of the official watchers, he would grapple for the cable on his shallow bed, pull it up, affix the gyroscope, and enter the machine. Then would come four and twenty hours of darkness and solitude, until he reached the Irish coast, when he would shut off the motor, fling off his diving suit, and abandoning the gyroscope to forever swim to the land.

Nothing could stop the accomplishment of this plan. His confidence revived, and in his pleasure in it, he felt the joy of life once more grow strong within his breast.

He bought his boat, a leaky fishing smack whose owner, a Long Island Yankee, evidently believed that he had done a smart stroke of work in disposing of his antiquated tub. Haynes loaded her with his machine. He had placed a torpedo-shaped iron cage over the gyroscope, hammering it out from parts of an old boiler which he had purchased as scrap iron, and making it absolutely watertight with a cork lining. The roof, which, in spite of its rounded edges, would have to bear enormous pressure, he reinforced with layers of brass. Over this he placed armor-plate, bought at a scrap sale at the Navy Yard, and over this another layer of brass plates, the whole so deftly hammered together and interspersed with cork and asphalted refuse from the sawmills that he felt confident no drop of water could penetrate.

There was an entrance which, when closed, formed an integral part of the machine, and a tiny window at the rear, protected by the overlapping roof, afforded an outlook. He set up the ragged sail and moved slowly, under a little wind, down Long Island sound, and so into the Atlantic. Several times squalls of wind threatened to overturn the crazy tub of a boat, and swamping seas drenched him, but in spite of these he kept his craft afloat, though, heavily weighted as she was, this necessitated continual balling. So he passed out of the sound and, rounding Long Island, entered the lower bay and aimed his course for the spit of sand which the ultimate point seen by eastward-bound vessels that leave New York. When at last he perceived himself to look back he saw the massive towers and buildings of Manhattan, hazy in the misty afternoon. He bade farewell to them forever and, with them, to that new world and all it had meant to him. At that moment all the experiences which he had undergone since that day when, five it and walked off. The next man drifted out and helped himself to a ten-cent specimen. Two more men came out. The Pittsburgh stogie remained alone.

Then there emerged from the theater a magnificent clad person who lightly waved a gold-headed cane. Instantly showed that he was the owner of the good cigar. He walked to the wire basket and an expression of hurt surprise showed on his face. He poked at the pitiful stogie resentfully.

"Well," he said aloud, "I gotta have something."

And when the guard wasn't looking he picked up the wire basket and disappeared. The humanitarian expert ended right there.

The paper used by the government printing office each year requires approximately 125,000,000 pounds of paper and 450,000,000 pounds of wood pulp.

years before, he had landed in America to recover his stolen lands, dropped from his mind. He felt the dawning of that peace which he had craved, at last. He set his face resolutely toward the old world and freedom—freedom both from that incessant pursuit which had been bounding him by night and by day and from the passions in his own heart.

Although the maps had taught him the approximate site of the cable, it was no slight task to discover it beneath that wilderness of waters on whose breast his water-logged craft tossed like a cork on a pool. His grappling iron hung from the center of the boat, through an aperture resembling that made of a counter-bored. Once he had caught the cable, a turn of the disconnected gyroscope would drag it up and catch the loop of it against the steel guard which was to hold it in place until Haynes was ready to dive down into the depths below. At nightfall he began his search, but it was bright morning before his iron fastened upon the stout coil, and only the pull of the gyroscope sufficed to drag that monstrous serpent, green with marine growths, from its resting place through fathoms of water. When at last he had secured it to the wheel he crept into his cage, fastening it from the inside. He donned his diver's dress and oxygen helmet, touched the stop of the gyroscope and, with a whirl, the waters rose and covered him. The boat dragged down at first, rose when her plunging freight parted from her, and floated, bottom up, and empty, upon the bay.

You've Heard That Spiel

"Man wants but little here below but every little helps." That's true in buying and selling. You've got to cut the corners nowadays in buying your goods, and in selling them the small purchaser counts a lot. You are just as welcome here whether looking for a bunch of shingles or a car of lumber.

We do business in this lumber office on the principle of cooperation. Small orders are acceptable because they help out the volume of business necessary to market large shipments. Without these "little helps," we could not buy at favorable rates nor quote low prices.

STATE PRESS.

It is a serious responsibility for any man to carry that of life or death. War means the killing of flowers, of youth of both countries involved. President Wilson and Secretary Bryan went into office pledged to the furtherance of a world peace. They know, as we know, all that those who clamor the loudest for war are likely to be the last to feel its consequences. Their patience they can settle the present difficulties without shedding the blood of thousands of the best men of country they will have brought about one of the greatest achievements of a hundred years. Every patriot who places country above party will support the administration in this crisis.—Waterloo Democrat.

It cost the general government over twelve thousand dollars to print one of Bob LaFollette's short speeches. It took three hundred and sixty-four pages in the Congressional Record. It is hoped that his "fair-minded" democracy to his "fair-minded" friends in Wisconsin and they be compelled to read it thru.—Chilton Times.

The democrats of Wisconsin are to be congratulated upon the fact that they have expressed the determination to stick to their own business and not give the democratic "assistance." The democratic party is better off without such assistance, especially in the primaries.—Hickland Center Democrat.

They are fixing up great combinations to deceive the farmers next fall. The leading progressives want to run in disguise. They are going to try to pull off a masked affair in the next campaign. You won't hear much about progressivism, but you will hear a lot about season's wages and duties, and stars, and planets, and nebulae, and such. In fact the progress, and such, in nebular hypothesis, will sing or dance or cut up capers, or do anything but try to discuss progressivism. The "tory" will be set up and continued as long as it promises to scare voters into voting for the rainbow chasers. Everything which bears evidence of usefulness in diverting attention from taxes will be resorted to. The "Eleventh Story League" will be shot out over the vocal chorus of every little pulpitizing progressive from now on until the close of the polls in November. The sparrows are scared stiff. They know their jobs are in jeopardy and they are jumping round like scared rabbits.—Madisonian.

OUR PRESIDENT.

How well he seems to have managed it—this sordid business of going to war; how fair he has been; how patient, how dignified, how infinitely gentle and kind. No bluster, no threats, no sukkers of anticipation, no licking of the nation's chops, no heated, hard-headed man. It is sad enough to go into war at any time, but it is less sad to go knowing that every honorable means has been taken to keep away from war. And this consolation President Wilson has given us by his wise, far-seeing, christian attitude before the provocation of a fair and mad and desperate and foolish.

The good God who knows all and watches over all, and sees all, and directs all, was in our hearts deeper than we knew when as a nation we chose this great series of soul to lead us.—By William Allen White, the noted progressive, editor of the Emporia, Kansas Gazette.

A Vote of Confidence? Yes!

The New York World: "Does The World think the Democratic lower house has justified the confidence of those of us who hailed it with so much hope?" asks Collier's. "Would The World advise a man at the Congressional elections this fall to vote Democrat or anti-Democrat?"

These are fair questions which merit fair answers.

The World decidedly thinks that the Democrats House "has justified the confidence of those of us much hope."

This Congress has revised the abuses out of an extortionate tariff. It has imposed an income tax which lifts part of the burden of taxation from poverty to wealth. It has enacted Banking and Currency law for which the American people have been striving for nearly twenty years. Whatever differences of opinion there may be about the administrative details of this measure, all financial authorities agree that under it this country cannot have another panic like those of 1873, 1893 and 1907.

In addition, this Congress has destroyed the lobby. In the case of the Panama Tolls bill it has not only wiped out a peculiarly hypocritical subsidy but it has reasserted the good faith of the nation in respect to treaty obligations. In the matter of Mexico it has scrupulously avoided all semblance of jingoism and demagoguery. Taking its work as a whole, the Congress that is still in session has achieved the most important record of constructive legislation of any Congress in fifty years.

The World would not advise a man who believes in a Payne-Aldrich tariff to vote for another Democratic Congress. It would not advise a man who believes in government by Wall street and special privilege to vote for such a Congress. It would not advise a man who believes in secret in lobbies and in treaty-breaking and in hidden subsidies to vote for such a Congress. It would not advise a man who expects an immediate millennium to vote for such a Congress. But if any Congress in a generation has earned a vote of confidence at the polls, it is the Sixty-third Congress now in session in Washington. The World is influenced by no partisan prejudices. We should hold the same opinion if the majority were Republicans or Progressives or Socialists. It is a matter of work well done.

NOT ALWAYS THE FAULT OF THE DEMOCRATS.

Washington, W. C. July 13.—President Roosevelt has fallen back on the calamity cry of the little Republican politicians through the country and takes the position that prosperity can not exist during a Democratic administration.

This is the same Mr. Roosevelt whose occupancy of the Presidency was chiefly signalled by the panic of 1907, and the ensuing depression, from which the country is now emerging.

During that panic, when Mr. Roosevelt was in the White House, there was organized in every section of the country NO MEAT CLUBS. Money was so scarce and meat was so high many people thought the land was cotted all for the meat and were forced to eat a vegetable diet. The people of this nation have not been forced to any such boycott under the Wilson administration. There is abundance everywhere.

You remember, of course, the SCRP days of the Roosevelt administration. In those days never-to-be-forgotten days people who had good money in the banks couldn't draw it out. Checks were no good. Depositors were given scrip instead of money, which had to be hawked around and finally exchanged on discount. Remember those dark days back in 1907? Well, the next time a little two-by-four Republican says anything about alleged business depression in the year 1914, just bark back to Republican rule and scrip.

On the floor of the House Congressman Rainey, of Illinois, forcefully called attention a few days ago to the deplorable situation that existed in 1907. The men who had toiled all day long, day after day, in our shops, and under the hot suns of summer on our farms, were unable to go to their banks and get the money they had earned and had deposited there.

During that period of time I may recall that a check on the Treasury of the United States, drawn by the sergeant-at-arms of this House, payable to myself for one month's salary, was refused payment by one of the greatest banks in the middle West. The banks looked up the money of the people in their vaults during that typical Republican panic, and they refused to honor their own paper, in violation of law.

We suspended the operation of the criminal and civil laws of this country and permitted through the land every bank that wanted to do so to violate the law. On this side of the House there was not a murmur of dissent or disapproval. Through the content of the day a single political speech calling attention to this panic, for which the Republican Party was directly responsible, was made on this side of the Chamber. It was a case where we applied the fact that during that period of time the money of the people in their vaults, and the money of the people in their hands, was refused payment by one of the greatest banks in the middle West.

Hunting Tax Dodgers.

Within a few days Uncle Sam will begin the biggest job of detecting which he has ever undertaken. There are some 700,000 tax dodgers in the United States—dodgers of the income tax—and it is Uncle Sam's job to ferret them out with such thoroughness that it will be an object lesson, the good effects of which will be felt for years to come.

The government will undoubtedly call in an immense force of detectives to aid in this work. Besides the regular force of internal revenue deputies, a body of men numbering several thousand, it is likely that the secret service branches of several other departments will be called upon to aid in hunting down the tax dodgers. It is to be a manhunt on a scale never before seen in the United States.

"A man is a fool who attempts to avoid the income tax," said Commissioner of Internal Revenue Osborne several weeks ago, and the commissioner knew exactly what he was talking about when he made that statement. For the future fiscal welfare of the United States—since it is the plan of statesmen to gradually increase the income tax and other forms of direct taxation, and gradually abandon indirect taxation—it is essential that the income tax be started off with a collection of the most complete sort.

Consequently it is likely that the full force of Uncle Sam's detective will be thrown into this work of finding the tax dodgers. The same intelligence and cunning which have upset the shrewdest of counterfeiters and smugglers will be employed to run down income tax dodgers. The trailers of bank thieves, of white slave raiders, of counterfeiters, of conspirators against the government, of class of criminals which the government is called upon to apprehend and punish, will now take the trail of the tax dodger.

The framers of the income tax law calculated that the collection would be about $54,000,000 the first year. They estimated that the number of citizens who would come within the tax would be 1,500,000. The actual returns have fallen far short of the estimates. To date the assessments are only $30,750,000, with some 800,000 persons making returns. The government sleuths therefore will set out on a trail to track down and bring in 700,000 more tax dodgers and 25,250,000 in taxes. The task is not so difficult as many might imagine. The detectives will have access to the books of banks and corporations. Those whose incomes are above $3,000 a year are generally well known in each community. The government does not expect many dodgers to escape. Heavy penalties are prescribed for evading the tax, and the government will undoubtedly attempt to exact these penalties to the last penny as part of the object lesson—Congressman C. E. Tavenner in The Star.

POTATO DISEASES.

Important Poster Issued by the State Agricultural Department.

"Help keep the diseases out of Wisconsin which are threatening the potato growing industry, not only of certain foreign countries, but of several states as well."

This appeal has just been sent out to the farmers of the state by the Agricultural Experiment station, University of Wisconsin. To call the attention of Wisconsin farmers to the importance of excluding from the state diseases which have menaced the potato crop of other states and foreign countries, a poster has been published and will be posted in all of the important potato growing sections.

Emphasizing the fact that Badger potato growers will be depended upon to furnish clean seed for farmers in all sections of the country, the poster urges the necessity of keeping germ diseases out of the state.

The poster warns farmers that, when once started, such diseases as powdery scab, scab, blight and rot, black wart, increase rapidly and soon become difficult to control. The exercise of extreme caution when buying seed, especially from other states, is given as the only sure method of protecting the potato industry of the state.

For the control of late and early blight, growers are advised to spray thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture (five pounds copper sulphate, five pounds of quick lime, and fifty quarts of water.) For bugs, one pound of paris green to two pounds of lead arsenate should be added. The use of this spray ought to begin ahead of the disease in July and be continuing a number of times at two week intervals.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

ON BORROWING.

Abraham Lincoln's views on the borrowing habit and idleness are probably best expressed in a letter he once wrote to a brother. His genuine concern for his relative's welfare is revealed in the letter, which runs in part as follows:

"Dear Brother:—Your request for $30 I do not think is best to comply with now. At the various times I have helped you a little you have said, 'We can get along very well now,' but in a short time I find you in the same difficulty again. Now this can only happen through some defect in you. What the defect is I think I know. You are not lazy, and still you are an idler. I doubt whether since I saw you you have done a good whole day's work in any one day. You do not very much dislike to work, but still you do not work much, merely because it does not seem to you you get enough out of it. This habit of uselessly wasting time is the whole difficulty. It is vastly important to you, and still more important to your children, that you break the habit.

"You are now in need of some money, and what I propose is that you shall go to work 'tooth and nail' for somebody who will give you money for it. Let father and your boys take charge of your things at home, prepare for a crop and make the crop, and you go to work for the best money wages you can get or in discharge of any debt you owe and, secure you a fair reward for your labor. I promise that for every dollar you win, get for your labor between this and the first of May, either in money or in your indebtedness, I will then give you one other dollar. By this if you hire yourself for $10 a month, from me you will get $10 more, making $20.

"In this I do not mean that you shall go off to St. Louis or the lead mines of Missouri or the gold mines of California, but I mean for you to go to it for the best wages you can get close to home in Coles county. If you will do this you will soon be out of debt, and what is better, you will have acquired a habit which will keep you from getting in debt again. But if I should now clear you out of debt, next year you would be just as deep in debt as ever.

"You have always been kind to me, and I do not mean to be unkind to you. On the contrary, if you but follow my advice you will find it worthy eighty times eighty dollars to you. Affectionately your brother, A LINCOLN."

"This man must win!"

He's the man who, from the beginning of time, has proved to the world that it can be done. You can check him but he'll come back and come back until you wreck him. His will is made of whole steel. It has snap but won't snap. Bend it as much as you please but watch out for the rebound! He'll thrive so long as he's alive. The length of his fight is the limit of his faith. It takes more than one hit to make him quit!

On motion by a unanimous vote of the council the Clerk called the roll the report of the board of public works was adopted.

The City Attorney reported as follows. In the matter of the claim of William Johnson against the City of Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, [Wisconsin, July 7th, 1914.

To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of the city of Grand Rapids, Wisconsin.

Gentlemen:--In re William Johnson vs. City of Grand Rapids.

Concerning the above entitled claim which was referred to me, as City Attorney, will say that I submitted the entire matter to the Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, and received a reply from them of which the following is a copy to-wit:

"Under the provisions of the compensation act as it existed at the time when Mr. Johnson was injured the City of Grand Rapids became liable for the necessary medical, surgical and hospital treatment for 90 days. While the man was totally disabled he was entitled to weekly wage. While partially disabled he was entitled to one-half of his weekly loss in wage. He is entitled to this amount weekly or until he has been paid four times his average annual earnings. This case has been pending so long that it seems advisable for a settlement to be made. We would suggest that you have Mr. Johnson examined by a competent surgeon to advise you of his extent of disability. If there is 50 per cent disability of the leg we would we would suggest as a fair settlement that he be paid as indemnity 50 per cent of the amount he might receive under the law if the leg be amputated. Under the amended act the man who loses the leg at his knee is entitled to 65 per cent of his average annual wage for a period of 100 weeks. If you cannot agree on a settlement and it is a fact that the man is partially disabled he is entitled to his weekly indemnity as stated above.

On motion by a unanimous vote of the council the Clerk calling the roll the following report of the Attorney was adopted with the recommendation that the Mayor appoint a committee of three Aldermen to make a final settlement with Mr. Johnson, and the mayor appointed Alderman Gillman, Calkins and Schaezel to act as such committee and re-

The sewer committee to whom was referred the draining of certain lots owned by John D. Smith et al reported as follows:

To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of the City of Grand Rapids,

Gentlemen:—We the undersigned Sewer Committee to whom was referred the matter of investigating the complaint of John D. Smith et al. wish to report as follows:

We find that some relief is necessary and have agreed with Smith et al that the city furnish them sufficient 8 inch sewer pipe not to exceed 200 feet in length to the 20th ward district and that said Smith, Solchenberger and Hanner do the digging and laying of said sewer free of charge to said city.

Said complainants have agreed to said condition and we recommend said pipe to be furnished.

Dated July 7, 1914.

On motion the above report of the sewer committee was adopted by a unanimous vote of the council, the Clerk calling the roll.

The committee on general business to whom was referred the matter of purchasing the Sampson lot report follows:

Ray C. Rogers, Wis., July 6, 1914.
Honorable Mayor and Common Council, Grand Rapids, Wis.

Again referring to the matter of Fire Engine House for the East Side Fire Department. We beg to recommend that the city purchase the Sampson lot situated on the East Side of Market Street and which was now rent from Mr. Sampson at $1200.00, as per option taken on property by our Mayor Mr. Cohen.

We furthermore recommend that steps be taken immediately for the ... said fire department in the way of constructing on this lot a building suitable for a volunteer fire department and for City Jail. The expense of such building to be determined by the Council. As previously reported, it is necessary that some action be taken as soon as possible, and it is recommended that a decision be reached at as early a date as possible.

On motion the above report of the committee on General Business was adopted by a unanimous vote of the council, the Clerk calling the roll.

The side walk committee was instructed by a unanimous vote of the council to view the one walks now owned and N. W. Ry. depots and report on the conditions at the next meeting.

On motion by unanimous vote of the council the board of public works was ordered to put in a walk in front of Mrs. V. D. Simon's property on First St. N., the Clerk calling the roll.

The following petition was presented to D. Waters et al and same referred to Board of Public Works.

To the Mayor and the Common Council of the City of Grand Rapids, Wis.

We the undersigned property holders adjoining the respective numbers of feet frontage abutting on Third Ave. North in the City of Grand Rapids, Wis., set opposite our names respectfully petition your Honorability body to sprinkle or cause to be sprinkled with crude oil that portion of said Third Ave. North and Third Ave. South that is signed for in this petition, for which we agree to pay the actual cost price of said sprinkling.

The following petition was presented to the council.

Grand Rapids, Wis., July 7th, 1914.

To the Mayor and Common Council of the City of Grand Rapids, Wis.

Gentlemen:—In the summer of 1913, we presented to your Honorability the petition requesting that we have the course of the public highway known as Cemetery road, where the same starts to angle from 15th street and continues along the same crosses diagonally from one corner to another of a block of land owned by us, be changed so as to run along either the South and East sides of said block or along the West and North sides of said block instead of from corner to corner.

The petition at that time was denied for the reason that we were informed by several aldermen, that the intent of the petition was misunderstanding and at that time we were invited to present the petition this year when we were led to believe that a favorable action would be taken thereon.

We therefore, at this time, petition your Honorability Body to change the course of this highway, so that it crosses said block diagonally, and constructing the same along the boundary of said block. The right of way for said highway will be donated to the city, as will also all other pieces to be used for highways in the future, should this petition be granted.

Respectfully submitted,
H. B. Boles, and
C. E. Boles,
by C. E. Boles.

On motion by a vote of 12 yeas to two nays the Clerk calling the roll the same was laid over to the next meeting, the whole council resolving itself into a committee of investigation to report at the next meeting.

On motion and by a vote of 12 yeas to 2 nays the Clerk calling the roll the ditch on the north side of Grand Ave. from 17th avenue east as far as the sewer goes was ordered filled up.

By unanimous vote of the Council the sewer committee was instructed to investigate the conditions existing at or near 20th avenue relative to the necessity of placing a sewer culvert under Grand Avenue at the place where there used to be such a culvert and to ascertain if possible whether there is or was a creek crossing Grand Avenue at or about that point.

Proposed ordinance No. — relative to sewer diggers license was referred back for further consideration.

On motion by 12 yeas to two nays the Chief of Police was allowed to attend the convention of Wisconsin Police in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. expenses to be paid by the city.

On motion, by unanimous vote of the council the police were instructed to collect dog tax after July 15, 1914 to charge $1.25 per tag for male dogs and $.25 per tag for female dogs and to assess arrears in all cases of refusal to pay tax.

For Psychical Research.

One of the most remarkable London clubs is the International Club of Psychical Research, in Regent street. It has no concern with merely earthly things. Although the club has only been founded a few months, it has already over 500 members. Every possible "ist" is represented. There are theosophists, spiritists, phrenologists, psychologists, spiritualists, mesmerists, and so on.

Remember.

Do you remember, if you lose heart about your work, that none of it is lost, that the good of every good deed remains, and works on forever; and that all that fails and is lost is the outside shell of the thing; which, perhaps might have been better done, but has nothing to do with the real good you have done to men's hearts.—Charles Kingsley.

CURING THE DRINK HABIT.

A business man formed the habit of leaving his office each morning about eleven o'clock to get a drink at a nearby bar. One morning, when he was in a great hurry, he dashed down to a nearby drug store and bought a bottle of ice cream soda.

Much to his surprise, he found the drink quite satisfying. As a result he has changed his cocktail habit into an ice cream soda habit. He's been on the new drink now for over six months and feels safe enough, and so gratified that he no longer hesitates to tell about what he considers to have been a narrow squeak.

Sociologists and government investigators have reported as a fact that much drinking amongst the poorer classes is due to uncultured craving for food. Undoubtedly a great deal of the eleven o'clock and five o'clock "thirst" amongst businessmen is hunger instead of thirst.

A somewhat nervous brain worker of acquaintance insists that a chocolate icecream soda at five o'clock is the good old "bracer" as it were.

Of course there is a limit to the extent to which food can successfully be substituted for drink.

As the Englishman, for example, he had been told by his physician to abstain from food at an apple when he felt a craving for a drink. "My word," he replied, "I was eating forty or fifty apples a day."

Drinking is due more to a state of mind than it is to any effect of the drug. In treating delirium tremens it is the common practice of physicians to gradually reduce the amount of alcohol. Otherwise, in private practice, there is a liability to the patient's collapsing. Notwithstanding this experience, at times the patient knows he has sacrificed all "rights" they can be stopped instantly without any apparent evil effect. This is no less true of drug fiends who may have acquired a dependence upon enormous doses of habit-forming drugs.

As a preventive of the drink habit amongst "moderate drinkers," it's a good rule not to take drink when you feel that you need it. Whatever may be said for or against drinking as a social custom, taking bracers is an exceedingly dangerous practice.

Physicians recognize that "feeling tired" is frequently a symptom of nervous collapse. Instituting one of the mental attitude for the cure of another is a mighty bad and dangerous practice. On the other hand, it's a good practice to acquire a harmless or even good habit to offset a beginning or established bad one.

The following suggestions for the treatment of working horses is not author have been published by the New York Women's League for Animals:

1. Lend lightly and drive slowly.
2. Stop in the shade if possible.
3. Water your horse as often as possible. So long as a horse is working, water in moderate quantities will not hurt him. But let him drink only new swallows if he is going to stand long.
4. When he comes in after work, sponge off the harness marks and eat, his eyes, his nose and mouth, and the dock. Wash his feet but not his legs.
5. If the thermometer is 75 degrees or higher, wipe him all over with a wet sponge. Use vinegar water if possible. Do not turn the horse him.
6. Saturday night give him a bran mash, cold; and add a tablespoonful of salt-peter.
7. Do not use a horse hat, unless it is a canopy-top hat. The ordinary bell-shaped hat does more harm than good.
8. A sponge on top of the head, even a cloth, is good if kept wet. Dry it is worse than nothing.
9. If the horse is overcome by heat, get him into the shade, remove his collar and bridle, wash out his mouth, sponge him all over, shower him with water, give him four ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or two ounces of sweet spirits of ner, a pint of water, or give him a pint of cold cream. Cool his head once, using cold water or, if necessary, chopped ice, wrapped in a cloth.
10. If a horse is off his feed, try him with two quarts of oats mixed with bran and a little water; and add a little salt or sugar. Or give him meal gruel or barley water to drink.
11. Watch your horse. If he stops breathing suddenly, or if he breathes short and quick, or if his ears droop, or if he stands with his legs braced sideways, he is in danger of heat or stroke and needs attention at once.
12. If it is so hot that the horse breathes in the stable at night, the him outside. Unless he cools off during the night, he cannot well stand the next day's heat.

One of the most striking examples of insanity lying in wait in the state of Pennsylvania is the renewed puppet orator, Senator Penrose, when he declared that the Democratic tariff law had cost the United States $77,000,000,000 in foreign trade since the Mexican war has been in progress about eighteen months, two months of which was during the Taft administration. The fact is that the port business of this country has averaged during the past few years, including last year, about $2,000,000,000 a year. So, it would take about twenty-five years to lose the trade which the Senator says has been lost, if every dollar of it had been withheld during the period of which he speaks. The absurdity of the Penrose statement is apparent to any intelligent person who stops to think at all, and it is as unthinking an absurdity as just as good as a fact, and it is to be unthinking that the Pennsylvania Senator appeals.

Few Democratic Congressmen and senators now favor adjourning without disposing of the trusts bills. For a time there was much talk of this kind in the Congressional cloakrooms on the part of the members facing campaigns for renomination and reelection. However, a broader view has prevailed. This is a country of working people who have scant sympathy with loafers. A large, vigorous, good natured people for the representatives of these working people to stay at work in Washington, even though they are tired and the weather hot, is certainly the best of party politics.

Yes, Reggie, the Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee, who now predicts that the republicans will have a majority in the next House of Representatives is the same Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee who predicted that one William H. Taft would have a majority in the electoral college in 1912.

When his satanic majesty contemplates Boies Penrose preaching in the Capitol of Philadelphia churches, the self-proclaimed "Christian" and "God-fellow certainly must treat himself to a good laugh.

In the short session the appropriations and a mass of routine legislation must be considered in less than three legislative months. The Senate reactionaries, though for in the minority, would easily defeat the bills filibustering. To run such a risk when five months are now available which to concentrate on this legislation, would be the height of political and economic folly. However, it is not necessary to consume five months; one should serve.

HOLD ON SAVE ME A LITTLE!

THE VERDICT IS AGAIN YE JUDD, CASE IS DISPOSED OF

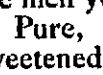

THE OLD TIMER IS ON TO THE REAL TOBACCO CHIEF

DON'T take a big chew. Just a nibble will satisfy you, because "Right-Cut" is the Real Tobacco Chew.

Taste it, smell it—see how different it is from ordinary tobacco.

By the time you've used up half a pouch you'll be telling your friends about it, same as the men you hear talking about it now.

Pure, rich, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

 Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and even the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few tobaccos you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why costs less in the end.

It is ready, chew, cut, fine and short shred so that you have time to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the real tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

If your dealer does not sell it, send us 10c. in stamps for a pouch of "Right-Cut" Chewing Tobacco.

Mrs. Mours of Ashland arrived in the city on Friday, being called home by the serious illness of his mother, Mrs. Frank Mours. Mr. and Mrs. John Mours of Milwaukee and Sam Mours of Winona were also called here last week.

L. Ward of Babcock was a business visitor in the city on Thursday.

Wm. Raath has returned from a visit with his son at Poyonette.

Mrs. Harrington of Sparta is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Ames.

—Brass beds $8.98. A splendid new stock just received. J. R. Ragan.

Miss Anna Kirkland has returned from an extended visit with relatives in Minnesota.

Mayor J. A. Cohen is in Hot Springs, Ark., to spend several weeks for his health.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Kenyon visited with friends in Tomah several days the past week.

Louis Lyons departed on Sunday for a three weeks visit with relatives in Green Bay.

Up at Marshfield recently a team of horses was scared into running away by a street sprinkler. We knew that some of the people up there shy at water, but did not suppose that it effected the horses in the same way.

George Ward, the wire grass king of Babcock was in the city on Friday to consult one of our dentists. Mr. Ward reports that the cutting of wire grass on the marshes near Babcock is in full swing and that the crop will be a good one.

Wm. Meyers of Marshfield was examined in this city on Friday for the purpose of discovering whether or not he was insane, and he was declared to be not of sound mind by the county judges.

Mrs. George Anderson returned to her home in Milwaukee after a weeks visit in the city with mother, Mrs. Podawiltz and other relatives.

—Say, John, why in time don't you get a bottle of Barker's Antiseptic? Your feet smell worse than a tanyard. Why do you want to punish your neighbors when Barker's Antiseptic will cure them. For sale by Johnson & Hill Co.

—The members of the Congregational Sunday school held their picnic up river last Thursday afternoon, there being about four hundred children and grownups in attendance. The picnicers were taken to the rendezvous in autos and spent the day in a most delightful manner.

W. O. Barton, clerk of the callers at the Tribune office on Monday. He was accompanied by his father, J. W. Barton of Staak, Wis., who is spending a couple of weeks with his son at Biron. Mr. Barton is also enjoying a visit from his married daughter, Mrs. Charles Kahring, of Gildeden.

Claus Johnson has sold his farm in the town of Sigel to a party from Chicago, who takes possession of the place at once. The farm contains eighty acres of good land and Mr. Johnson has lived on the place for 47 years. He expects to move to the city to make his home as soon as the business is closed up.

Mrs. Arthur Wenzel, of LaGrande, Oregon, who was here some time ago by the death of her mother, returned from a visit at the Wenzel home in Merrill and will visit with her sister, Mrs. Miles Foster for a short time before returning to her home.

Undersheriff Cliff Bluest and Officer Roland Payne took Ed. Elliott of Nekoosa to the asylum at Oshkosh on Saturday. Mr. Elliott was postmaster at Saratoga at one time and owned a farm. Love for strong drink got the best of him and of late years he has been a heavy drinker. His family is living out west where they moved a number of years ago.

The "Booster Edition" of the Grand Rapids Tribune last week was certainly a good one. Six additional pages of the Tribune, an eight column paper, set forth the advantages of Grand Rapids as a manufacturing center, as a good town to do business in and as a good town to live in. The edition is a credit to the Tribune publishers.—Burlington Standard Democrat.

G. J. Kaudy received a telegram from his brother N. L. Kaudy, who lives at Webster, Burnett county, to the effect that the latter's daughter Genevieve had been drowned that day. Particulars of the tragedy were wanting. The family resides on the shore of Clam Lake and it is supposed that the young lady was out boating and met with some kind of a mishap. G. J. Kaudy left for Webster on Monday morning.

Street Cars Close Down.

The electric cars between this city and Nekoosa resumed business Sunday afternoon after a layoff of nearly a week, and the people all along the line were enabled to realize what a handy institution they are by having the use of them cut off for a time.

The close down was caused by a transfer being made from this city to the South Side in obtaining power. Since the cars were established power has been obtained from the Consolidated company, but the contract with this company having run out the company, has made a contract with the Central Pulp and Water Power company to furnish power.

Getting their power from nearer the middle of the line will distribute it more evenly than has been the case heretofore, and probably give them a little more power at the lower end, altho it is doubtful if the public will notice the fact.

Engage Local Man.

Stevens Point Gazette:—At a meeting of the Industrial board for the local continuation and night schools, held Thursday evening, C. C. Hayward of Grand Rapids was elected to the position of principal.

Mr. Hayward, both by experience and training in the University of Wisconsin, is especially well fitted for the position. He is a married man and will remove to this city in August, when, it is probable, he will begin the work of organizing and making ready for the opening of the school. His salary was set at $1,100. A brother of Mr. Hayward will have a similar position at Grand Rapids the coming year.

—Our furniture and carpet business has been the largest this season we have ever had—why? The largest stock, lowest prices, and liberal treatment to all. J. R. Ragan.

LIFE INSURANCE REFUSED

Thousands of men are refused life insurance every year because of some slight disability or for some similar trouble back in their family.

If you have been refused life insurance for any reason and want to insure those depending on you, it is an easy matter to provide a fund for their protection in case you die. Pay your "premiums" to the bank. Deposit regularly a certain sum with us. You can pile up money rapidly if you do it with system. It is payable to your estate. There is no trouble getting it out.

Many men keep two accounts at the bank—one for checking purposes, to pay bills, keep posted on expenses, etc., the other a trust fund, to be added regularly and which they never draw out—a protection for their families in case of death.

Auburndale Man Drowned.
Joseph Baxler, a young man residing at Auburndale was drowned Sunday night while in swimming with some companions in the Eau Claire river.
Deceased was about 25 years of age and had taken several companions with him in an auto to Green Valley, where they went in swimming. It seems that Baxler was a very poor swimmer and that he was caught in the swift current and swept out of reach of his companions before they could do anything for him. The body was subsequently recovered, but life was extinct.

CURIOUS RESEMBLANCES IN NATURE

Robert H. Moulton

OTRACE in natural objects a resemblance, either structural or pictorial, to other objects with which they have no real connection is a diverting pastime. Moreover, though at first thought it may seem somewhat puerile, it can in fact be turned to good account as a means of stimulating the imagination, and inducing the mind to embark upon a course of truly scientific investigation which may lead to important discoveries.

This applies in particular to the training of the youthful student. All those who have gained experience as teachers will readily admit the initial difficulty which exists in arousing the intelligent interest of a class in study. In other words, something is needed to set the machinery of the mind in motion. For example, a flower or an insect, as such, may fail to evoke the desired response. But if we can point out some curious or grotesque likeness which it bears to a familiar creature or thing, we are able from this starting point to lead on by carefully planned stages to such great questions as structure, natural affinity, and adaptation to environment.

When nature is in one of her imitative moods, the products of her workshop frequently bear all the earmarks of a deliberate fake. Occasionally they seem to have been conceived and executed in a spirit of sportiveness. As an indication of this mood, the remarkable Talra crab of Japan, which has lately attracted the attention of science, stands forth as a conspicuous example.

In Japanese tradition there is a story to the effect that many years ago a great naval battle was fought in the Sea of Japan between a force of pirates and Japanese, resulting in the total destruction of the pirate fleet. The story continues that since that day all of the crabs of a certain species found on that part of the coast have borne on their backs the face of a Japanese warrior.

An examination of one of these crabs reveals at a glance the somewhat startling visage. The human-like face is not only there, and typically oriental in appearance at that, but actually resembles the face of a drowned man, with open mouth and greatly swollen features.

Whether the Japanese idea that the Talra crab offers good evidence of the transmigration of the souls of dead bodies into the bodies of lower animals be accepted or not, the phenomenon described is certainly very interesting. Another curious thing about this crab is the fact that it is equipped on its back with four short supplementary legs, which are shown in the accompanying photograph at the corners of the mouth of the face, so that if it accidentally turned upside down, it is able to run quite as well in that fashion as in its ordinary position. The advantages of such an equipment will readily be appreciated by those who have witnessed the awkward efforts of other species of crabs, turtles, and various kinds of bugs to right or propel themselves when lying on their backs.

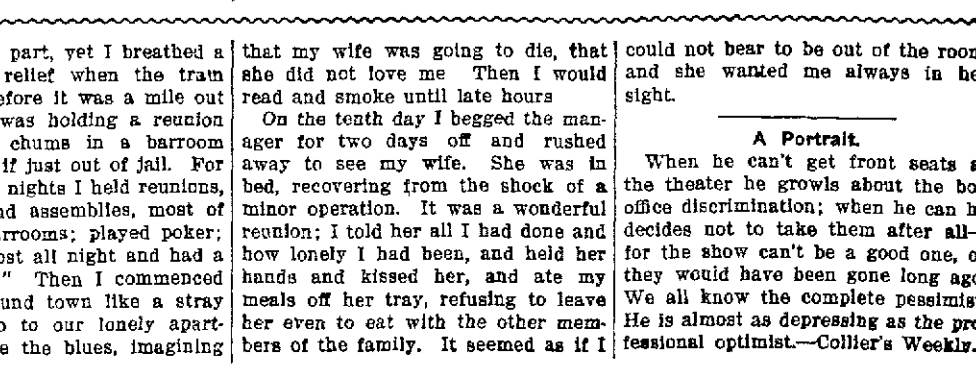

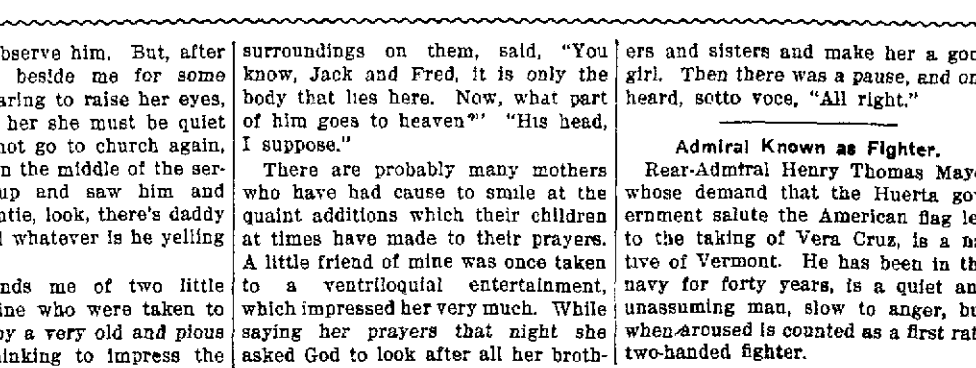

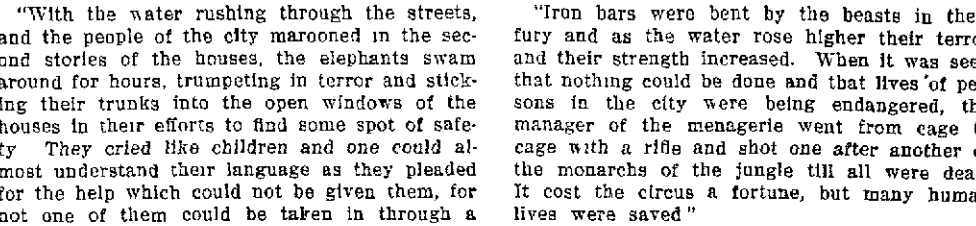

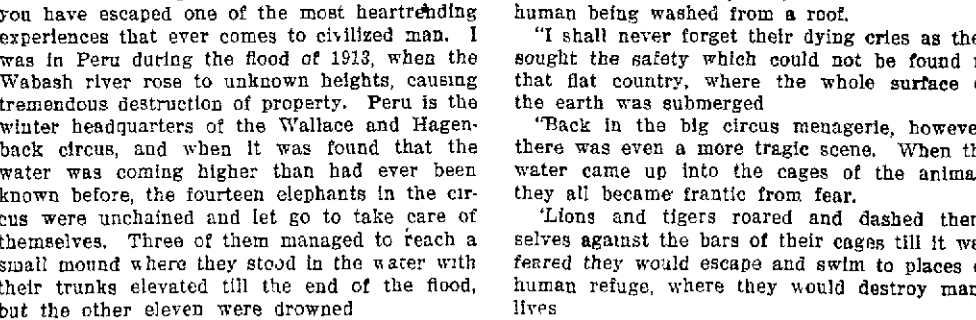

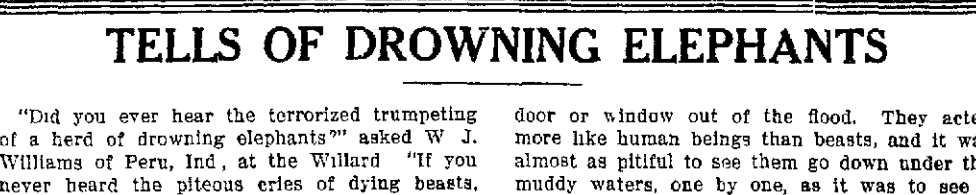

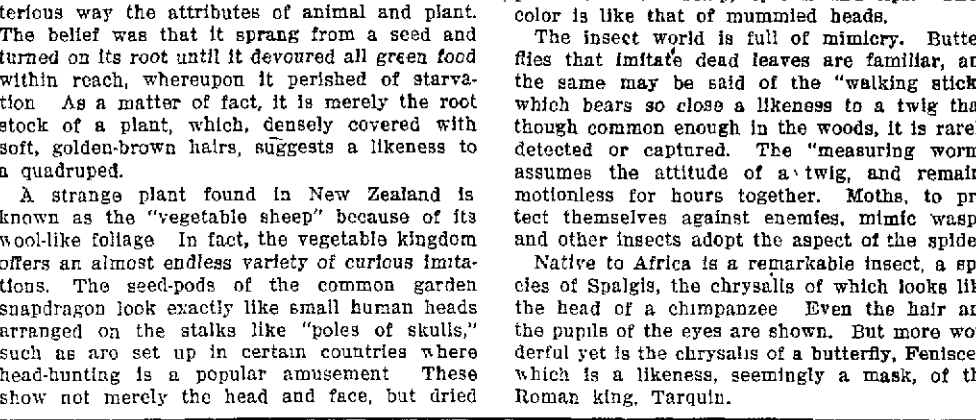

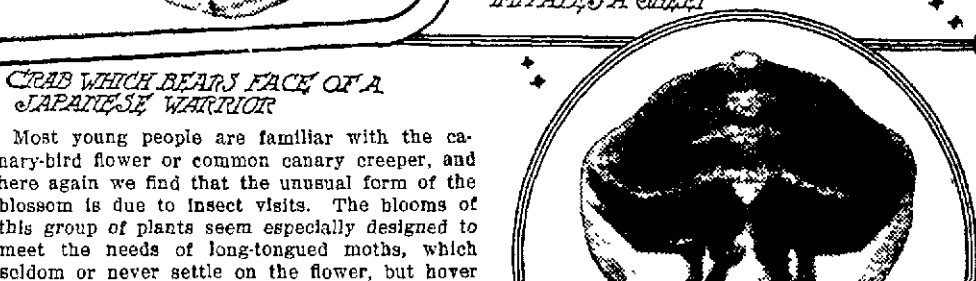

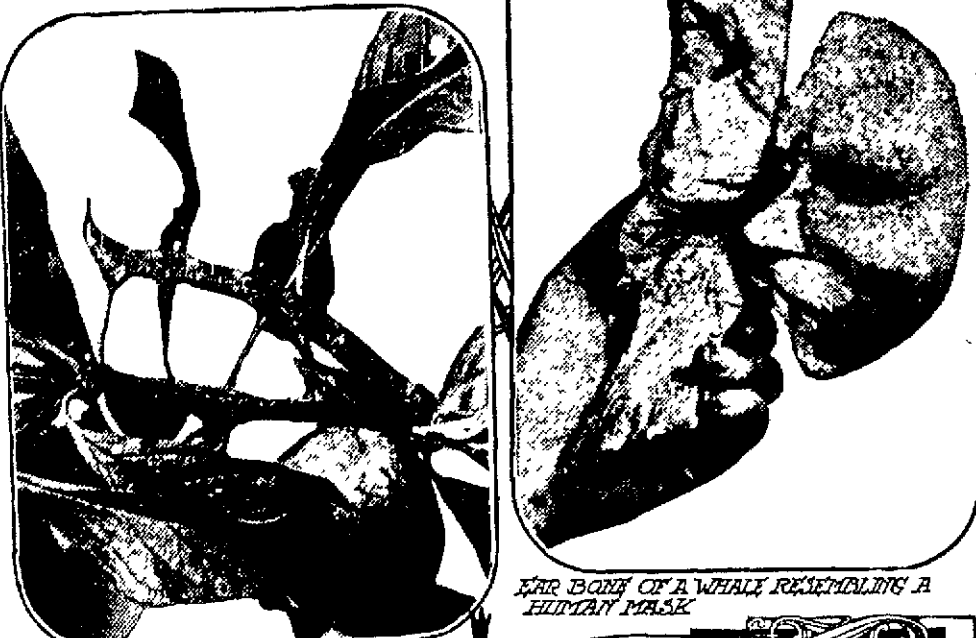

Another remarkable example of typical racial features is found in the earbone of a finback whale which was picked up on a Norwegian beach. It has all the features of a Scandinavian face, of low caste, with rounded cheek bones, flat nose-bridge small upper lip and receding jaw. In general appearance, however, the face is more like a death mask than that of a living person. That this was not a freak formation is proved by an examination of the ear-bones of other finback whales at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, all of which have substantially the same form.

In the plant kingdom nature's imitations are equally astonishing and much more numerous than in either the animal or vegetable kingdoms. There are several species of orchids, for instance, bearing popular names which suggest the likeness of the flower to some member of the animal kingdom, among them being the man orchid, the be orchid, the spider orchid, the lizard orchid, and the holy ghost orchid. While it is true that some of the supposed likenesses are more or less imaginative, others are wonderfully distinct and well bear close scrutiny. This is particularly true of the holy ghost orchid, which contains within each of its blossoms a pecten with half spread wings. It is necessary to view the blossom from squarely in front, as in the case of the lower blossom shown in the accompanying photograph, to get the full effect of the resemblance. When viewed from this position, the bird is so perfect that it looks as if ready to take flight. The plant, which is a native of the isthmus of Panama, is very rare, there being perhaps not more than half a dozen specimens in the United States, including two in the greenhouses of the White House at Washington. It grows sturdily, but, in order to thrive, has to be kept in a hothouse with the temperature of a Turkish bath.

In all of the instances referred to above the resemblance is mostly due to the lip or labellum among the most highly specialized flowers, while their extraordinary modifications are the result largely if not entirely of insect interference. Many of these flowers depend entirely upon the visits of insects for pollination, and without the aid of these winged emissaries of Cupid they are quite unable to get seed. The labellum is the recognized alighting platform upon which the insect stands while it probes the recesses of the flower in search of nectar; and as orchids are so closely associated with insects, we must assume that the special shape of the labellum in each instance is more or less definitely related to the convenience of the guests that are specially catered for by the flower in question. In certain instances this is actually known to be the case. Throughout the great orchid family the labellum exhibits an almost endless variety of configuration, and we are justified in the assumption that each form is exactly adapted to attract, or uphold, a particular kind of insect.

OF STERLING MERIT

By MARY RUHL

It seemed like a dream to Arthur Lessing to be back again at Squire Brenner's house that afternoon in early May.

The placid New England country, green with young grass, the apple-trees in blossom, the well remembered scenes came back so vividly to his remembrance. It was four years since he had left Wakefield, to make his way in the world, and now, at the age of twenty-six, he was back, Brenner's guest, and already with an established position in the city.

It was an open secret that he had come back to ask Madge to be his wife. They were old friends. She had written to him sometimes, and there was always a note of intimacy in her letters. It had been an idyllic love affair, though no word had been spoken.

And they received him like an old friend. When Madge shook hands with him he felt the same subtle touch of sympathy. And Edith, her sister, smiled as she greeted him. She seemed to know; everybody knew the purpose of his return during that week that he was to be the guest of his father's oldest friend.

Squire Brenner alluded tactfully to the impending engagement as they strolled under the big chestnut trees together.

"The man who gets Madge will be a lucky fellow," he said. "She is a girl of sterling merit. And she will inherit a good deal of money." Then he turned suddenly and shook hands with the young fellow.

In the old days he and Leslie Carter had been rivals for Madge. Leslie had borne no malice when his suit was gently declined. Lessing had hardly expected to see Carter there, but he seemed to be on intimate terms with the family. He, too, was a weekend guest at the Brenner home.

During dinner Lessing noticed with a touch of the old jealousy that Carter seemed to have established a brotherly relationship with the girls. And this was all that was needed to kindle the young man's determination. He would ask Madge that night.

The opportunity was easily arrived at, for the squire retired to his library, and Mrs. Brenner nodded over her sewing. The girls and Carter had gone out into the garden, Lessing lingering behind to settle Mrs. Brenner in her chair and put the knitting needles in her lap. Then he hurried out.

Madge was waiting for him. That was a blunt way of putting it, and yet he knew that the same instinct of understanding which had always bound them together had sent her alone to that arbor beneath the chestnuts. The night was dark; he could only see her white dress shining. He went softly toward her.

"Dearest," he whispered, taking her by the hands, "I love you. Will you be my wife?"

"Yes," she whispered, and pressed her lips to his. And then he found himself looking into Edith's dark eyes.

It was well for his training that he had been schooled in a difficult world. He did not start or betray himself. He linked her arm through his and they started back toward the house together.

And, at the door, stood Madge and Carter.

"Aren't you coming out?" Carter began; and then the sight of Lessing's face checked him.

"I want to tell you all," said Lessing, "that Edith has promised to be my wife."

He kissed her again at the foot of the stairs and went up to his room. He sat for hours in his chair, thinking. All the rules of his breeding told him that the mistake must never be acknowledged. To ask a woman to be one's wife and then to jilt her was an unpardonable offense in his code. He knew Edith had always cared a little for him; in the old days there had been a little jealousy between the girls on that account. But the thought of Madge and what he had lost, the look of surprise upon her face at the announcement—these things made life seem intolerable. And Edith loved him! There was no possibility of misunderstanding what that expression had meant when she kissed him.

A man who lives by a code is bound with silken threads stronger than steel. Lessing knew that there was no way out of the entanglement with honor.

He was the first down in the morning, but after he had paced the grounds for a few minutes, Carter joined him.

"I didn't have much chance to congratulate you last night," he said, of fering his hand. "It's odd, isn't it?" he continued, with a short laugh. "Do you know, I always thought it was Madge you cared for."

Lessing tore himself away, because he could not trust himself to speak. As he entered the breakfast-room Madge passed him. They stopped and looked at each other for an instant. There were dark rings under her eyes, and she looked worn and haggard. Then she inclined her head slowly and was about to pass him.

"Madge!" cried Lessing, suddenly. He touched her arm. "Won't you come here a moment?" he asked, drawing her toward the door. "Madge! I thought—"

She tried to pass him, but he blocked the way. She was crying; she could not restrain herself. "Don't!" he pleaded—and suddenly he was holding her in his arms and kissing her as he had done so often in his dreams, but had never done in reality.

She lay in his arms without resistance, and it was fully a minute before she could get her voice started.

"Why—why?" she stammered. "It was you, Madge," he cried desperately. "I thought that Edith was you. It was quite dark, and you both wore white dresses. I thought that you knew, and that you had gone there to wait for me."

"You thought it was—I?" she exclaimed, looking up at him with staring eyes.

"I made a mad mistake which I must atone for the rest of my life," he answered. "Edith loves me, and she thinks I love her. You remember the old days? This must be good-bye, Madge, forever, my dear."

A silvery laugh from the breakfast room started them. They spun round, to see Edith standing there. "I couldn't help hearing you," she said, laughing happily. "O, Arthur, how foolish we both were! I could never—and have found courage to tell you."

"To tell me?"

"That I thought you were Leslie," she replied. "And then, in the revulsion of it all, Arthur kissed Edith again. But Madge did not seem to care."

SACRED TO TENDER MEMORY

Sunday Night Sparking a Time of Joy That Leaves Its Impression on the Heart.

The Sunday night sparking is a sacred institution, the Manchester Mirror and American remarks.

But for it, life would be at a certain age not worth living, and race suicide would become indeed a matter of serious apprehension.

The man who has not tender memories of taking his girl home from Sunday evening service and going in for a "little while" is apt to be a crusty bachelor, hating women because he never knew one in her most charming attitude.

The man whose youth was never mellowed by a Sunday night kiss, stolen from not too unwilling lips, has missed half his life.

And, yes, alas!—The Sunday night when the fire burned low—and the lamp, too—held a hallowed place in the memories of every normal life. The low fire and the low light have cast a softened glow that reaches all the way to the grave.

They who are grown old and heart hardened may sneer at it now and think that young hearts should be calloused as old ones are; but time was with all of us when we looked forward through the seven days of the week to Sunday night as the golden time of the week.

And our fathers did it. And our grandfathers. And our great-grandfathers. It is an ancient human custom that did not originate with our own youth or fall with it. The children do it in spite of our frowns. And our grandchildren will. And our great-grandchildren. Generations come and go, but Sunday night sparking remains.

Value of Human Energy.
To raise a dish of strawberries for your Christmas dinner requires enough energy to grow your bread for a year.

The studied care which produces one orchid would, if employed in raising potatoes, give you a supply for many months.

Labor is the vital commodity in most of the things we eat and wear and enjoy. It changes a pound of metal worth a couple of dollars into watch parts worth thousands.

It converts $12 worth of cloth into a $50 suit of clothes. It multiplies the value of steel a hundred times when it makes razor blades.

When human energy is so valuable a thing, it is surprising how much of it is thrown away—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Were in Embryo.
Mrs. Bonfleur (Miss Violet Vanbrugh) tells a story of two actors who were discussing their professional careers. One of them mentioned that since he last saw the other he had left the stage.

"But why did you leave the stage?" his friend asked, in surprise.

"Well," replied the other, "I had a hint that I was not suited for it."

"I see," was the friend's comment.

"The little birds told you, eh?"

"Well, no, not exactly," was the reply. "But they might have become birds if they had been allowed to hatch."

They Take One Look.
"How do you keep the girls at work? We employed girls for a time, but we found they spent too much time before the mirror."

"Our mirrors are all twisted, and make a girl's face look like it had been stepped on by a horse."

Not Surprising.
"What do you think of an open meeting to discuss ways and means, by self-confessed rosters and grafters?"

"That's nervy. Who are they?"

"Members of a professional gardeners' club."

Nice Distinction.
In regard to the question of preference as to whether a single man or a married man should be elected to the office of district attorney, the General Lafayette in a conversation during his second visit to America. He shook hands with 8,000 men in one day, says the legend, and used but seven words in all. He asked each one: "Are you married?" If the answer was yes, he exclaimed: "Fortunate fellow!" If no, "Lucky dog!" After a long levee, a friend asked how the general could reconcile his congratulations to wedded and single men alike. The Frenchman laughed and answered: "Why, my dear boy, can you not perceive the vast difference between a lucky dog and a fortunate fellow?"

Negligible.

200 SNAKES MAKE VOYAGE A HORROR

The Brilliant, British Bark, Arrives in New York After Eventful 115-Day Trip.

NO SLEEP FOR CREW

Lascar, Chinese and Hindu Deck Hands All to Danger by Fighting Among Themselves—Orientals Afraid of the Reptiles.

New York.—Two hundred dandy East Indian snakes overrunning the ship, five heat-crazed yaks doing everything but climb aloft and a crew of 36 Lascars, Chinese and Chinese threatening every minute to cut one another's throats—such was the combination which added ten years to the age of Captain Grant of the Brilliant.

The Brilliant recently arrived in New York harbor after a voyage of 115 days from Hong-kong. Life began to be just one strenuous minute after another almost before Victoria island had faded over the horizon, the excitement continuing unabated until the Jersey coast was sighted.

The Brilliant, carrying oil stores, had an eventful voyage outward bound to Hong-kong and Kobe. She carried an able crew of Swedes and Norwegians, but they tired of the long grind and deserted the ship between watches a few hours after the vessel dropped anchor in Kobe harbor. With the holds filled with Japanese merchandise, Captain Grant was compelled to sign a nondescript crew composed of no less than ten nationalities in order to man his vessel for the homeward bound trip to New York. He cleared at Kobe, stopped at Higo until December 18, and made Hong-kong in two weeks. The entire crew deserted at this port and the seamen joined in their place represented, said Captain Grant, the scum of the port.

Squared away to the southward with the Straits of Sundas as the objective, the Brilliant became the theater for a series of events which made sleep a matter of three winks at a time for the officers. First of all it was found that most of the "able seamen" had never seen any more experience than would be necessary to handle a rowboat. When most of the men were failed to heed the warning of Police-Langlois of the Chicago avenue station. The bridge rose rapidly, and before the aged man could run back, he was forced to grab a girder.

When the two leaves of the bridge reached an almost vertical position, Birdsell's strength began to give out. Langlois, watching the figure high in the air, stepped to a position directly under and waited. A minute or two passed. Then the man's hold loosened, and he dropped like a plummet.

Langlois, however, had braced himself for the shock, and with arms outstretched he caught the man. Both the policeman and Birdsell were slightly bruised, but the former's action had broken the man's fall sufficiently to prevent serious injury. The shock knocked the policeman to the pavement.

"I wish to thank you, officer," said Birdsell, as he brushed himself off. "You saved me from being seriously hurt."

BRAVERY WINS $100 A WEEK

Oklahoma Lad, Who Rescued a Kidnaped Girl Sixteen Years Ago, Is Rewarded.

Achille, Okla.—Charles Brown, a farmer of Bryan county, now has an income of $100 a week because sixteen years ago he saved the life of a child and the father did not forget.

Sixteen years ago Charles Brown, now of Achille, Bryan county, then a mere boy, was working for a lumber company in Tennessee. The owner of the mill had a daughter, a little child, fair and winsome, who was the pet of the lumber camp. Two bandits, with a purpose of extorting a ransom, kidnapped the child and made away with her toward the Cumberland mountains. The father immediately informed the sheriff, who organized a posse and started in pursuit. Charles Brown, because of his youth, was deemed unfit for service and left behind. Arming himself with two revolvers he set out on foot to overtake the bandits. All that night and next day the boy sped on his way, until his feet were blistered. He was passing sustenance, for he was passing through an uninhabited country.

The second night he laydied and captured the bandits, driving them 22 miles above of him to a telegraph station, where he notified the sheriff, and came home with the rescued girl and prisoners.

Brown had nearly forgotten the act, when one day last week he received notice from a firm of lawyers in Tennessee informing him that his old employer, who had grown to be a multimillionaire, had recently died and had left to him an allowance of $100 a week for life.

SNAKES TRY TO HOLD UP CAR

Express Messenger on Santa Fe Reported With Firearms—Armed Passengers, But Saved Self.

Temple, Tex.—The express messenger on the north-bound Santa Fe train arriving here the other day was the hero of a hair raising experience that he will not soon forget. While engaged in his duties he was startled by an unusual and sinister noise close to his vicinity and looking up discovered a large rattlesnake coiled and ready to strike. Hastily getting his pistol he fired at the reptile, killing it at the first shot. Three other rattlers appeared on the scene and, backing off to a place of safety, the messenger shot them down, one by one. Investigation showed that the snakes had escaped from a box shipped from Wharton destined to a northern city for show purposes.

The fusillade of shots alarmed many of the passengers, who fancied that a proverbial holdup of the train was in progress by train bandits. All of the snakes were killed before they had a chance to inflict injury.

Business Men Work on Roads.
Chicago.—Seven hundred and fifty bankers, lawyers, doctors, manufacturers and merchants worked side by side with prisoners from the county jail and transformed the South Bend-Niles highway, ten miles long, into a model gravel pike.

DROPS FROM BRIDGE CAUGHT BY OFFICER

Chicago Man, Trapped on Rising "Jack-nife," Falls into Arms of Policeman.

Chicago.—Facing almost certain death on the pavement, many feet below, an aged man, swinging from a steel girder at the top of an upraised "jack-nife" bridge over the Chicago river, dropped to safety the other day in the outstretched arms of a policeman.

The accident, which held a big crowd spellbound at Kinzie street and the river, occurred during the passage of a boat under the bridge. Samuel Birdsell, fifty-eight years old, was crossing the bridge at the time and

The owner of the mill had a daughter, a little child, fair and winsome, who was the pet of the lumber camp. Two bandits, with a purpose of extorting a ransom, kidnapped the child and made away with her toward the Cumberland mountains. The father immediately informed the sheriff, who organized a posse and started in pursuit. Charles Brown, because of his youth, was deemed unfit for service and left behind. Arming himself with two revolvers he set out on foot to overtake the bandits. All that night and next day the boy sped on his way, until his feet were blistered. He was passing sustenance, for he was passing through an uninhabited country.

The second night he laydied and captured the bandits, driving them 22 miles above of him to a telegraph station, where he notified the sheriff, and came home with the rescued girl and prisoners.

Brown had nearly forgotten the act, when one day last week he received notice from a firm of lawyers in Tennessee informing him that his old employer, who had grown to be a multimillionaire, had recently died and had left to him an allowance of $100 a week for life.

SNAKES TRY TO HOLD UP CAR

Express Messenger on Santa Fe Reported With Firearms—Armed Passengers, But Saved Self.

Temple, Tex.—The express messenger on the north-bound Santa Fe train arriving here the other day was the hero of a hair raising experience that he will not soon forget. While engaged in his duties he was startled by an unusual and sinister noise close to his vicinity and looking up discovered a large rattlesnake coiled and ready to strike. Hastily getting his pistol he fired at the reptile, killing it at the first shot. Three other rattlers appeared on the scene and, backing off to a place of safety, the messenger shot them down, one by one. Investigation showed that the snakes had escaped from a box shipped from Wharton destined to a northern city for show purposes.

The fusillade of shots alarmed many of the passengers, who fancied that a proverbial holdup of the train was in progress by train bandits. All of the snakes were killed before they had a chance to inflict injury.

Business Men Work on Roads.
Chicago.—Seven hundred and fifty bankers, lawyers, doctors, manufacturers and merchants worked side by side with prisoners from the county jail and transformed the South Bend-Niles highway, ten miles long, into a model gravel pike.

Would Fly Kitchen Table.
Chicago.—Lincoln Beachey, aviator who first "committed" a corkerew flippin', boasts, "Give me a sufficiently strong motor and I will fly a kitchen table." Aviation has arrived.

BEACHEY SHAKES DICE WITH DEATH

SAYS TAKING CHANCES IS NOT BUSINESS WITH HIM, BUT A DIVERSION.

LIKES FLYING FOR THRILLS

As Boy, Beachey Was Great Student of Birds and Their Means of Travelling Through the Air.

RACES RUN ON TIME

There will be no long waits between races at the 1914 state fair. Supt. of Speed R. J. White, an experienced horseman and race man, will see that at every heat is put on exactly on the minute.

"There will be no tiresome delays this year," he says. "People will see racing all of the time while each day's racing program is on."

Milwaukee, Wis., July 21.—How would you like to shake dice with death? That is the table from you waiting to take in the stakes, if you lose? That is practically what Lincoln Beachey, world's greatest aviator, does and will do every time he makes a flight at this year's Wisconsin State Fair. He will fly three times each day on Sept. 15, 16, 17 and 18.

Beachey is famed as the most skillful of all aviators and does the most remarkable things with an aeroplane, but his scientific and skillful feats pale into insignificance when compared with the stunts he accomplished through just sheer nerve and daring. The loop and the upside down flying feats are easy for Beachey when everything goes right. But let the motor hesitate just a fraction of a second as the aeroplane is at the apex of the loop and a "tail slide" of a few feet will mean the death of the flier. Beachey is no fool. He knows far better than anyone else just what chance he is taking. But it's all a part of his game for him—this sport of risking his neck on the margin of carburetor, wiring and dozens of other factors in the construction of an aeroplane.

"It is simply the dancing along life's icy brink and the attendant excitement that makes life worth while," said Beachey recently. "Chance-taking is not a business with me. It is a delightful diversion, and no music lover ever is more charmed by listening to the inspiring strains of his favorite opera; superbly sung by a great artist, when I am charmed at the hum of my motor when I am sailing in or out of a loop and upside down flight. Some hunt lions and tigers and answer its call because my whole life centers around the sensations of flying."

"A great scientist once told me that I had the bird instinct in my being. As a boy I was a great lover of birds. Their song did not appeal to me as much as their superb dips and dives and other feats of flying. I can do things the birds cannot do. I can loop the loop and upside down. Birds can not."

Away From Dust of Autos. The increase of motoring and the consequent increase of dust have, to some considerable extent, changed the value of villa and hotel sites in visitors' resorts. The choice, especially in the south of France and Italy, is now much in favor of houses well away from the main road, and even well outside towns.

Getting the Best of It. The wisest man would make a good bargain if he could trade off what he knows for what he doesn't know.
